

Special town meeting Dec. 1

Wilmington selectmen have called a special town meeting for Monday, December 1, primarily to consider a zoning change from R60 to R20 on 9.8 acres of land off Andover Street. The meeting was requested by Kevin MacDonald who turned in petitions with over 200 signatures on them.

According to MacDonald, the zoning change would not be spot zoning but an extension of a zone which stops at his property line.

Selectmen decided Monday night that the warrant would close October 24. Anyone wishing to place an article on the warrant has until that date to collect 100 signatures and take them to the Town Hall.

It is not known at this time where the meeting will be held.

Liquor license hearing

Wilmington's Board of Selectmen called a hearing for 5 p.m. October 14 to review Shamrock Liquor's right to retain its liquor license. The action came in the wake of a second violation by the employees and management of that store.

According to Police Chief Bobby Stewart, seven juveniles under the age of 21 were arrested August 28 after purchasing liquor from the establishment. Complaints were also filed against two sales clerks at the time. Stewart said this was the second such offense in two years and he requested selectmen to suspend, revoke, or "otherwise alter" Shamrock's license.

Selectman Jim Stewart agreed his board "cannot look away on a second offense."

Chairman Rocco DePasquale said "The town should exercise its full authority in any issue of this type." During the proceedings, he stepped down from the chair since he holds a liquor license for his restaurant and didn't wish to place the town in a "compromising position."

No bids for housing

by Arlene Surprenant
Wilmington Housing Authority (WHA) members received mixed news last Wednesday on the progress of the eight low to moderate income homes slated to be built in several areas of town.

After a frustrating delay as they waited for approval of septic designs, members finally received official confirmation that the septic system design meets Title V regulations.

"It's official," said Executive

Parents may express views

Elementary parents will have an opportunity to express their views on goals for the 1986-87 school year at one of three meetings in October. The meetings will be held October 2 at the Woburn Street School, October 9 at the Shawheen School and October 16 at the Wildwood School at 7:30 p.m.

Assistant Superintendent Henry Dembowski is planning the open forum type meetings. He and other staff personnel will be present to discuss and answer questions about the accreditation process, element-

Director Lillian Buckley calling the confirmation "a major step forward."

On the down side, members have to readvertise for a contractor to undertake the construction of the eight homes. They learned Wednesday that the September 2 deadline for bids came and went with no one bidding on the work.

State Rep. Jim Miceli said at the meeting this wasn't surprising as contractors are not lacking work right now and will only go after a job which will bring in a sizeable profit. He told the board he felt the state should increase the allocation for these jobs, something that's been done before, and in the meantime, the housing authority should start calling contractors on their own.

"I'll be glad to see a shovel go into the ground," he added.

Repair work soon on Deming Way units

by Arlene Surprenant
The end may be in sight and Deming Way tenants may finally see some much needed work done on their apartments before the end of the year. The entire bidding process to hire a contractor, sign a contract, and begin work is expected to take another 10 to 14 weeks.

Since the spring of 1985 when an architect was hired to plan for the modernization of Deming Way, progress has been slow. At last Wednesday's housing authority meeting, members pushed for work to get underway as soon as possible. They were especially concerned with installing 40 storm doors and caulking windows and doorframes before the onset of the cold weather.

Both Dan Gillis and Bill Strob sounded the same angry note, saying this has been going on for "too long." Since the units themselves are approximately 30 years old, said Executive Director Lillian Buckley, the need to update them is great.

Besides putting in the storm doors, modernization work will include replacement of floors which are rotting and have been subject to termite infestation, the addition of insulation, painting the units, and solving basement water problems.

In other action, members learned Wednesday that the May Institute project to house autistic children in Wilmington has hit a stumbling block.

In 1984, representatives of the May Institute, sought the board's help in locating a home in town to provide a transitional place for patients moving from hospital to home. WHA members approved the idea and applied and received a $180,000 grant to fund the home.

Now, said Buckley, Peter Troy of the Institute has been told by the Town Manager and local builders and realtors there are no available lots in town. Gillis said he would look into the problem.

Police check truck weights on Burlington Avenue bridge

Eight-ton limit

The Burlington Avenue bridge in Wilmington Center is frequently used by trucks. Traffic is often stopped on the bridge, due to the nearby traffic lights.

Friday was not the day to drive an overweight truck across the bridge in Wilmington Center. Trooper Baker of the Massachusetts State Police was working with the Wilmington Police to enforce the eight-ton weight limit and instruct Wilmington Police on procedures for enforcement of the limit.

Portable scales were brought in, although the law states that any registered scale within a five mile radius can be used. The Wilmington Police hope that an arrangement can be made with a local gravel company.

The Burlington Avenue bridge was constructed in the early 1900's and was rebuilt two years ago.

There are several old railroad bridges in Wilmington, under the custody of the state D.P.W. The bridges were built with the idea of preventing accidents between trains and horse-drawn vehicles.

The bridges served their intended purpose well, but are not able to sustain the weight of modern trucks.

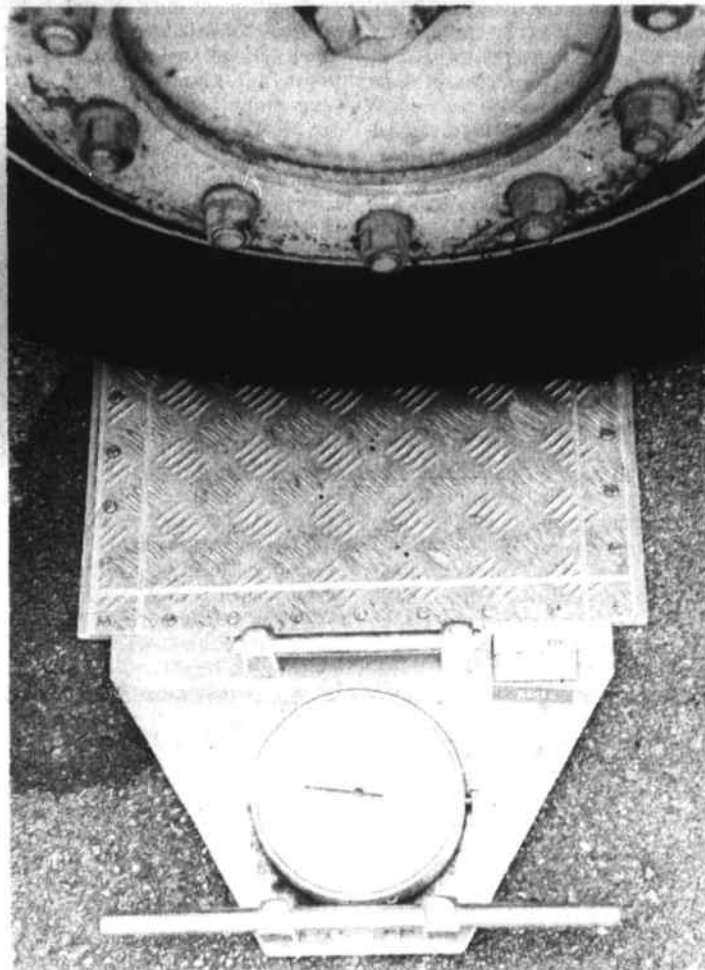

There has been concern expressed by both Town Manager Stapczynski and State Rep Miceli as to the unsafe conditions. Perhaps the worst example of what can happen to a bridge occurred about 25 years ago, when a gravel truck collapsed the old Shawsheen Avenue bridge. That bridge, since replaced by the Fred Cain Bridge (Route 129), now carries only foot traffic.

The Wilmington Police will be conducting weigh-ins on a regular basis using scales. Damage to the bridge is one concern and there are others. Local youths tend to congregate under the bridge and trains pass under many times a day.

Weight restrictions on other bridges in Wilmington will be enforced. Eames Street, Butters Row and Lake Street all have bridges with low load limits.

Fines can be quite heavy, too. The fine for the driver ignoring the weight restriction is $20. The fine for the owner of the truck can end up with hundreds or thousands of dollars in fines. The first 10,000 pounds over the weight limit are assessed at $30 per thousand. After 10,000 pounds over weight it costs $60 per 1,000 pounds. A thorough examination is also made of the truck for any other violations of safety laws and certificates for what ever there might be on the truck.

Ten-ton scale

The portable scale goes up to 20,000 pounds. Four scales are used simultaneously for weighing trucks. For tractor-trailer units, a more complicated system is used.

Weight check

Trooper Tom Baker of the Mass. State Police checks the weight of a truck on a portable scale.

View from the depot

The present Burlington Avenue bridge dates from the turn of the century. It would be replaced as a part of a major reconstruction of Wilmington Center, which has been in the works for many years.

Risky climb

The stairs from the Wilmington Depot to the Burlington Avenue bridge are in a poor state of repair, but do make an interesting photograph.

Frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

John Pesaturo of Lowell is not too likely to be doing business with the Town of Wilmington in the near future, as Roy McClanahan can well testify. John is the owner of J & P Painting Company. And, if there is anything that Roy, who is the superintendent of public buildings, can use around town, it is the services of a painting company.

The story begins with the summer of 1985. Wilmington had advertised for bids for the painting of the Harnden Tavern and the Roman House. With no bids received for either project, John Pesaturo came on the scene to offer his services for the painting of the Tavern and the adjacent barn. This project was completed last summer to the satisfaction of the Superintendent of Public Buildings, Roy McClanahan.

When summer 1986 arrived, John came back to Wilmington, hoping to get the job for painting the Roman House, which presently houses part of the administration for the public school system. John must have quite a keen eye to be able to tell that the Roman House is in need of a paint job. The paint is peeling so quickly by itself that there will never be any need for scraping prior to painting. Roy was glad to see John, but told him that he would first have to secure an insurance policy for his painting company, following which he could proceed with the work.

Having spent a day running around to get the necessary insurance policy, John returned to the office of the Superintendent of Public Buildings to begin the job. Unfortunately for him, Roy McClanahan had experienced a change of heart, informing Pesaturo that his services would not now be needed and that Roy was going to have the job done by his own crew. All this took place on the Tuesday after Labor Day.

Subsequently, John has an insurance policy, but no job. And Wilmington has a public building which remains in a state of disrepair. The leading question to be asked is, if Roy saw fit to suddenly cancel a verbal agreement with a contractor after having put him to the expense of getting an insurance policy, when will Roy himself see to the painting of the Roman House?

And apparently there are needs at the Roman House which go beyond the parameters of a paint job. There are front stairs which are in need of repair, as well as some exterior grounds work. According to Henry Dembowski, Asst. Superintendent of Schools, "We are anxiously awaiting the painting of the Roman House and repair of the front stairs."

Hopefully, the method of maintenance at the Roman House is not going to be 'Walker School style'. Everyone will remember the Walker School, which suffered severe structural damage in the basement due to the fact that the water in the basement was not monitored in the closed, unheated building. The eventual result was the demolition of the old Walker School.

According to Superintendent of Public Buildings Roy McClanahan, the Roman House will be painted "as soon as the weather breaks." And incidentally, the color chosen will be a colonial blue. As for the front stairs, there are no plans presently to repair them.

We'll just have to see what happens when the "weather breaks."

As for the future, there are questions concerning the staffing of the Public Buildings Department, and whether or not it is sufficient for the demands of the community. The department presently consists of 36 employees, 28 of whom are custodians, thus leaving a work crew of eight. But the most important aspect is the planning and coordination of the department throughout the year. Due to various budget restraints, certain fluctuations in an annual maintenance schedule must be expected; but the fact remains that the town is not keeping up with the physical needs of many public buildings. Therefore, what is needed is a careful review of the budget, staffing, and specifically, the coordination of the department. There has to be some reasonable attempt to meet the needs of town owned buildings before they come to the point of serious decay or structural damage, as was the case with the Walker School. Any long range plan must include as few changes as possible, and that will require some very competent leadership and coordination.

More debate on role of town counsel

by Arlene Surprenant

A letter from Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski to School Superintendent Robert Horan was the cause of some disagreement at Monday's Board of Selectmen meeting. The letter, which spelled out the role of Town Counsel Alan Altman, was dispatched September 19 after board members reviewed that role with Stapczynski at a recent executive session.

According to the letter, Altman is available for legal work for all Wilmington boards except the Housing Authority, Redevelopment Authority, the Water and Sewer Department and the School Committee. However, added Stapczynski, all boards may use the services of the Town Counsel if they pay for his services out of their own budgets.

This, contended Selectman Jim Stewart, is not what the taxpayers understand his role to be. Prior to a court case against the School Committee which involved town accountant Dorothy Peters, said Stewart, Altman served the school department. At that time, he went on, selectmen instructed Altman not to be available to the department until the case was resolved. It's been resolved over a year, added Stewart, and Altman is still not available to the department. If the Board of Selectmen deems that Town Counsel works for the town, then he should work for "everybody" without extra pay, except in long litigation court cases, said Stewart.

During the discussion, it was pointed out that, by law, the School Committee can use up to $10,000 of their own budget per year for collective bargaining. And since 1985, a new law states that the School Committee may employ legal counsel for general purposes also.

Buzz explained that in conversations with Altman, the Town Counsel is looking for additional compensation in Chapter 766 cases and personnel cases. He said Altman has always handled these cases in the past. He told selectmen Altman will continue to give advice and his opinion when asked.

Chairman Rocco DePasquale said it was his understanding that the school department had extra funds in its budget to cover legal matters beyond collective bargaining. He added that should it come down to a question of serving "two masters," his board takes precedence over the School Committee.

Bob Doucette felt the answer might be to pay more for Altman's services through the budget and to pay additional monies for extended litigation. He also agreed Altman should work for all boards since he's Town Counsel, but he questioned the extent to which he should.

"I'm not downgrading Alan; he does a great job," said Stewart. He, too, thought Altman should have a budget increase if this is warranted.

Historical Commission wants some say on old buildings

Concern over the historic character of town buildings prompted a second letter from the Wilmington Historical Commission to the board of selectmen.

According to the letter from commission chairman, Dorothy Lafionatis, the commission should be allowed to "expert our power" and have some say in the renovation work on older buildings in town. One of the buildings referred to was the Fourth of July building across from the Town Common, which recently underwent renovation to improve the facility. Though selectmen say the addition was publicized in local papers, Lafionatis claimed her organization should have had some input.

Selectman chairman Rocco DePasquale said at a board meeting Monday he didn't think the work detracted from the Fourth of July structure. However, he suggested Lafionatis be placed on a future agenda to discuss the commission's role as a "watchdog" committee.

Robert Doucette suggested the commission prepare a list of older buildings which would be considered historic and shouldn't be touched without input from the Historical Commission.

The Humble Farmer

The death of an industry

Four men lounged by a pool at an exclusive club in Key West. Waiters in crisp white jackets moved briskly between tables topped by white and orange beach umbrellas. The men drank slowly as they watched a small portable television set.

At the end of the news broadcast one of them shut off the TV and laughed as he said, "More U.S. troops sent to Bolivia on drug raids. I suppose we have to use them for something."

"They'll never stop it," the skinny man said. "They could send in the whole army and they'll never stop it. They thought they'd stop drinking with Prohibition but they couldn't. You can't keep people from getting what they want. The government should sell cocaine and pot just like they do whiskey and walk the taxes right to it."

"Lot of people wouldn't like that, Mo," said the first man. "you'd be destroying the biggest industry in the country--it's 100 percent tax free and it runs without lawyers."

A bald fat man drained his glass, picked up a cigar, and said, "Everyone's a hippy these days. I don't know why else they'd be clamoring for drugs. A man's a fool to take a chance on destroying his body."

The fourth man said, "Why doesn't the government do anything right? They could put the whole drug business on the skids if they really wanted to get rid of it."

"More troops wouldn't do it," Moe said.

"True," said the fourth man, "But think what would happen if the government itself got into the drug business. The price would drop the first day and Congress would have to aid a failing industry with price supports. Within a year drug farmers would be crying about floods or drought. It would be either too hot or too cold to get a decent crop and farms would fail. Bankers would hesitate to back such an uncertain business. Newspapers, magazines and television would report the plight of the poverty stricken drug dealers. Everyone would feel bad for them."

"Back up a bit," said the fat man. "The government bureaucracy needed to run the biggest business in the country would bring the entire drug industry to its knees."

Moe said, "No one can deny that the government is incapable of running anything for profit. Imagine the Senate hearings when they discover some company has been selling pot planting hand towels for $3,000 each."

"You've got the idea," said the fourth man. "Cocaine-processing centers will be strangled by almost as many permits and licenses presently required by your friendly corner grocery. Millions will be wasted when they are shut down by provincial fire-marshalls for failing to have enough exits."

"Surplus drugs would spoil when stored in huge air-conditioned warehouses. Human services would distribute what they could to the poor, but that would only be a drop in the bucket."

"Don't forget the unions and their pickets out by the front gate," cried the fat man. "Lots of people have forgotten that there can be no jobs unless companies make a profit. And then there are lists of regulations and rights of workers that have to be posted on all the walls."

The first man looked at the fat man's cigar and said, "No smoking policies. Every pot farm and cocaine plant would be required by law to post smoking and no smoking areas. Then there would be fantastic insurance expenses to cover the employees."

Moe looked at the fourth man and said, "You're right. Producing and marketing drugs is the biggest and most successful business in the country simply because it is completely free of government control. You've convinced me that it could be completely destroyed by subsidies and a few thousand choice regulations."

A matter of priorities

by Arlene Surprenant

My life revolves around lists and priorities and very little else these days. It's not surprising. It happens every year at this time as my children start back to school. Without conscious realization, the pace quickens and demands on my time reach their peak.

I start my day writing lists for every imaginable purpose. There's the grocery list and one for appointments and Things To Do. There's lists of people to call and dates for coming school events. There's a list detailing each hour and which kids have to be picked up when. There's a list of new exercises to try -- for the umpteenth time -- and one for all excursions: to the apple orchard, pumpkin farm, and Kittery's ever-expanding outlets.

An hour into the day I come to the conclusion that someone should add another 10 hours to the 24 hour day. I reach this conclusion as I glare at last night's dishes piled high in the sink just waiting for willing hands to transfer them to the dishwasher.

What do I do with my time, you may ask. During the day, I make half-hearted swipes at making five beds then decide what the heck -- who'll see them anyway? I separate white wash from colored and manage to get through two loads before the incessant ringing of the phone interrupts. I pick up a trail of discarded clothes and comic books, water a roomful of drooping plants, and take out the overflowing trash. I remember my promise to paint my six-year-old's room, a chore put on hold through the hot summer months. I'm almost done when the phone rings again. I put in an hour or so writing and checking facts with those helpful secretaries at the Roman House and Town Hall, then make a quick trip to the store for my husband and to the library for my kids. It turns into an hour and a half excursion, thanks to backed up traffic on Rt. 38 and a few friendly encounters along the way.

Over the years I've learned to gulp breakfast in five minutes, grab lunch in six, and prepare dinner in less than 20 -- almost. I've become expert at pulling outfits together and rushing out the door for this meeting or that. I get my second wind around midnight and can put in another two or three hours making deadline, fortified by such diet-busters as hot chocolate, Twinkies, and whatever else is at hand. During the day, whatever dusting or vacuuming doesn't get done in a half hour just doesn't get done.

Actually, it all comes down to a matter of priorities. Chauffeur my 15-year-old to her volunteer hospital work this summer, for instance, took precedence over doing the ironing or washing floors. Reading about the adventures of the Blue Witch or the Berenstain Bears with my youngest, for example, almost always comes before my novels or the Six O'Clock News. Pouring over college catalogs with my oldest and choosing which senior pose is most becoming for The Senior Picture, for instance, assumes almost the same importance as paying bills and meeting deadlines. Strolling through a path of crackling autumn leaves on a picture perfect day is equated -- at least in my mind -- with taking time to smell the roses.

I have a fantasy. One day my husband and children will come home and ask the question "What did you do all day?" And I'll just sit there and placidly reply "Nothing." And mean it. Pure bliss.

Planning board discusses subdivision

by Arlene Surprenant
Members of the Wilmington Planning Board moved a step closer Tuesday night to a decision of the definitive plan of the Ox Pasture subdivision.

The public hearing last night gave abutters an opportunity to air their concerns before a final decision is reached to approve or disapprove the plan. Though the hearing was advertised under owners Domenic Germano and Russell Traywick, the project was recently taken over by local builder Joseph Langone and the Northeast Development Corp.

Project engineer Erich Nietzsche went before the Conservation Commission September 3 to explain the project and its impact on wetlands in order to be eligible for an Order of Conditions. The planning board had requested the concurrent filing before it would take action, Nietzsche explained.

The 15 lot subdivision, located at the intersection of Woburn and Eames Street, has had a troubled history. According to Nietzsche, Langone is the third property owner and this is the second set of plans submitted for the property. The original set was submitted to both the planning board and the conservation commission a year and a half ago and turned down partly because of excessive disturbance of wetlands and the need for a new "sewer profile."

Nietzsche said he has been involved with the project since December and has since remapped the entire area, straightened the road to minimize filling of wetlands, and agreed to have the project serviced by a sewer along Eames Street which would run underneath the

Residential and industrial abutters expressed concern with water runoff onto their land, increased traffic in the neighborhood, the creation of a "mosquito haven" due to retention areas, and the creation of noise pollution once trees are cut down by Analog Devices.

Analog representative Richard Mitchell told the board Tuesday his company found some discrepancies in the plan after being allowed to make their own observations by the Conservation Commission. He pointed out some lots may be unbuildable because of large areas of wetlands and there was indeed a "noise problem" with his company located so close to the proposed development.

Abutter Robert Lewis raised a question of legality. He insisted the applicant in the newspaper advertisement had to be the actual owner and, in this case, that wasn't true, he said. Germano and Traywick are the owners listed in the newspaper, not Langone. Planning Board chairman Carole Hamilton said she would consult with Town Counsel Alan Altman on the legal aspects and get back to Lewis.

Tewksbury parents plan clean-up day

The Heathbrook P.A.C. is holding a family work party on Saturday, September 27, 1986 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The P.A.C. has planned a number of work projects that could improve the school for the use of their children. These include painting the playground equipment, trimming the hedges, pruning some of the trees, cleaning the flower beds, cutting the grass, and raking, picking up litter, cleaning up the parking area and cutting down the weeds.

Richard Palmer is chairman for the P.A.C. project and feels that forty to fifty volunteers are needed to complete the projects in such a short period.

All parents interested in volunteering are asked to call Mr. Palmer at 851-5862.

Shawsheen School

October 2 will be the kick off day for the school's annual fundraiser. This year, the fundraiser will incorporate safety awareness and feature McGruff the Crime Prevention Dog. Each participant will receive a coloring book and a prize. All money will benefit students at the school.

New officers for the Shawsheen PAC are Joanne Neale (president), Sandy Arciero (vice pres.), Mary Mahoney (secretary), Linda Whitebone (treasurer), Laura Berube (publicity), Jane Nitchie (hostess)

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas, at least to the school's PAC as they ready for their annual Christmas Fair. This year the popular affair will be held November 15. Pat Dennis and Jane Nitchie have agreed to co-chair the event, which will feature a PAC table, refreshments, and crafts and items sold by local craftspeople.

Woburn Street School

Just a reminder that the school's open house will be held this Thursday, September 25 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Parents are welcome to visit classrooms and meet their children's teacher.

Safety Officer Robert Shelley was present at the school Tuesday along with a member of the automobile registry to show a film on bus safety and review the rules and regulations of riding the school bus. Grades K through three viewed the film at 9 a.m. while students in grades four through six were able to see it at 10 a.m.

Wilmington High School

High school parents are invited to attend the PAC's first meeting of the year at 7:30 p.m. September 29 in the new cafeteria. On the agenda will be a variety of old and new business, including an update of the renovation project and drug policy changes, election of officers, and planning new activities for the year. The next meeting is slated for October 27.

At a recent meeting of a broad delegation of seniors interested in serving on the yearbook staff, Eric Peters and Fred Butters were elected co-editors. Both have prior experience in the field.

Editors Note: If you would like your school to receive some publicity or if you have anything of interest you would like included in this column, please call Arlene Surprenant at 658-5696 or drop a note in the Town Crier office. This column will run as time and space permit.

SHOULD YOU RETIRE EARLY?

When does Social Security start? Though the "standard" retirement age has long been 65, more and more people are choosing to stop working earlier. There are dollars and cents pluses, too.

If you retire at instead of 65, you get only 80 percent of your normal benefits, and that benefit cut continues as long as you live. But a little arithmetic will show you that you may come out ahead, because of that first three years of payments to you. If you were to wait until you were 65 to collect, it would take 12 years -- until you were 77 years old -- to collect as much as you would get by starting at age 62.

No matter when you retire, your spouse must be at least 62 to be eligible to collect spousal benefits. These are usually half the amount the retiree gets, somewhat less if you retire before 65.

One important point: if you retire early, make sure you're covered for health insurance (you must be 65 for Medicare).

You decide ... which team would you want handling the hoses if your house was on fire? During a water polo match at the recent Tewksbury Fire Department open house, the TFD muster team (left) took on a crew from the Department of Public Works (right). While the match ended in a tie, it was obvious from the start which team was more at home behind the nozzles.

Following the Spaulding Bell

Young meet old

Christopher Ellis, age 6, reaches for the clapper of the 99-year-old Spaulding Bell. The bell is now on permanent display in front of the Tewksbury main fire station as part of a memorial to fallen firefighters.

(Editor's note: The following is the text of a speech made by Maureen Kelley during an open house and dedication ceremony at the Tewksbury Fire Department main station house on Sept. 13.)

Today Tewksbury comes together to accept an aerial ladder (truck), a piece of equipment which speaks to us of the future. At the same time, we recognize those who have gone before in this department, Tewksbury's deceased firefighters. We do this symbolically with the dedication of this, the Spaulding Bell.

This 99-year-old bell, which rests on its fine new pedestal again, reminds us of the merging of the past and future -- that merging is here and now.

This beautiful bell, cast in 1887, has had a long and interesting history.

Often referred to as the Foster School Bell, in reality it came to the town several years before the Foster School was actually opened and did not hang in the belfry at the Foster School until many years after the school was dedicated.

The bell came to Tewksbury in 1887, the year in which it was cast. It arrived in Tewksbury at a time when the center of town was referred to as Tewksbury Village -- and it came to a town which had several years before formed a group known as the Village Improvement Association.

One member of the Association was Benjamin Spaulding, then a young man and a seventh generation descendent of the Rev. Sampson Spaulding, first minister of the Congregational Church.

Benjamin Spaulding was a charter member of the Village Improvement Association and, as part of this group, was committed to beautification of the town and development of the common. In 1891 this group assisted in the building of the bandstand.

But how as this man involved with this bell?

Well, in 1887 a new District Number Two school was built in the village, actually on the spot where Nahil's Drug Store now stands. This school was the first home of Tewksbury High School, serving in this capacity until 1891 when the first class was graduated. The town built the school, but the bell that was hung in the belfry in 1887 was donated through the fund-raising efforts of Benjamin Spaulding.

The bell was purchased from the McShane Bell Foundry in Baltimore, Maryland, a company that is still in existence. We believe the bell was transported by train to Tewksbury and then by wagon to the school. The bell would see many changes in Tewksbury in the coming years and its fate would be tied to many of those changes.

During 1891 - '92 the high school classes were held in the vestry hall of the Congregational Church and the district school, home of the bell, was used as an elementary school. The Foster School was dedicated in 1894 and served as Tewksbury's third high school until 1900.

In that year the Foster School was converted to elementary use and high school students were sent to Lowell High School. This situation existed until Tewksbury's fourth high school (now the Center School) opened in 1935. The present high school is actually Tewksbury's fifth high school location.

Between 1895 and 1906 many individuals tried to have the bell moved to the new Foster School. When the Foster School had opened in 1894, the District No. 2 School was converted to use as the new home of the public library. Many residents felt the bell belonged in the new and larger Foster School. But, town meeting being what it is and was, the money was not actually appropriated until 1906. The bell was moved at a cost of $170. It was then 19 years old.

From 1911 to 1920 the library shared the District Two School Building. During this era the old District Two School was called the Library School. In 1920 the library was moved to the new town hall and the Library School House was renovated and renamed the Spaulding School after Ben Spaulding, the man who had given the school its bell.

Benjamin Spaulding died in 1925 at 72 years of age. In the last year of his life he served on the School Building Committee for the addition to the Foster School.

Between 1926 and 1941 the Spaulding School was used sporadically. The 1946 town meeting voted to have the selectmen sell the building. This was not actually done until a few years later.

Benjamin Spaulding was eulogized after his death in these words: "(an) active and valued member to whom the interests of the town was the first consideration ... (he was) of sterling honesty and unquestionable integrity in all his dealings with his fellow man."

Spaulding's accomplishments were many. He served as postmaster for many years. During these years the post office was located in his home, the Spaulding Homestead on East Street, current residence of the Gaffney Family.

Benjamin Spaulding was the first treasurer as well as a founding member and trustee of the present Tewksbury Cemetery Corporation. He was a founding member of the Village Improvement Association; a trustee of the public library; a member of the Committee on Appropriations; a member (1902) of the Old Home Week Committee; the Street Lighting Committee; the Foster School Addition Building Committee; and a parks commissioner.

He can very appropriately be remembered at this time along with Tewksbury's deceased firefighters because Spaulding was a member of Tewksbury's Committee on Water Supply and Fire Protection.

In addition, at a special town meeting in 1902, he urged the town to investigate means of protecting the town against fire and encouraged the town to purchase a new chemical engine.

The bell Benjamin Spaulding had brought to the town remained in the belfry of the Foster School for many years after his death. However, during the 1930s, structural damage to the belfry necessitated the removal of the bell. For many years it rested unused on that attic floor.

In the mid 1950s the bell was removed from its resting place. According to retired school custodian Supt. Frank McCusker, there was a major roofing project undertaken at the Foster school. The roofers and custodians together cut a hole in the floor and lowered the 400 lb. bell down into the school's old third floor assembly hall -- Pickering Hall -- by means of rope, chains and brute strength. In the current vernacular, it was an awesome undertaking.

TOWN CRIER, SEPTEMBER 24, 1986.

For the next 30 years the bell was stored in various locations -- almost but not quite forgotten.

In the past few years we have seen a resurgence of that spirit inherent in Tewksbury's early Village Improvement Association. We are seeing a real renaissance in Tewksbury's Center. Suddenly people are recognizing what we have and why we should preserve our heritage.

Civic minded individuals and groups have given the town a restored bandstand, a statue commemorating Anne Sullivan, a restored watering trough, flag poles, park benches, flowers planted on the common and a restored hand tub fire engine on display today.

Businessmen have seen the good in restoration of historic buildings and the town has begun restoring our town hall. Finally, this historic bell has been preserved and displayed.

Benjamin Spaulding and the Tewksbury Village Improvement Association would be very proud of us, as would Tewksbury's deceased firefighters who, in their own way, helped preserve and protect their town. It is now our town. Our new aerial ladder will help protect it but the decisions of all of us who work for restoration will preserve it. The Spaulding Bell is silent now but in another way it gives ringing testimony as it symbolically honors all who have, like Benjamin Spaulding, "been active and valued members to whom the interest of the town was the first consideration." What better legacy can we leave?

(Mrs. Kelley is a library assistant at the Patten Library and former chairperson of the Tewksbury Historical Commission.)

Parental pressure and drug abuse

Parental pressures on young athletes was the subject of the September 16 joint meeting of the Wilmington Youth Hockey and the Chemical People Project "a school drug/alcohol abuse campaign. With over 100 parents and children attending the meeting held at the Regional Health Center, Mrs. Phyllis Vieira, secretary of Wilmington Youth Hockey and coordinator of the program, was very pleased.

"This was great and we got more parents than we really expected," she said. We are now in the planning stages of working on programs for all youth sports in Wilmington; we know it is not just the hockey parents who put pressure to win on their kids."

"Sports can offer young people new challenges, improved skills, and a sense of accomplishment and a lot of fun. But while sports participation can be healthy, it doesn't always work out that way. Often youngsters are unable to enjoy youth sports because of too much pressure from coaches and parents. Even spectators are a problem sometimes. It's important to make sure we are encouraging young people to do their best instead of pushing children beyond their limits," Bobby Orr in the film "First Goal."

This was the theme of the evening with several speakers including Bob DeGregoria, athletic director of Merrimack College. Mr. DeGregoria stated the importance of instilling a high self esteem in young athletes and not pushing the "win at all cost" attitude. "It is a shame that the coaches do not always remember that the game is for the kids to have fun not for them to relive their childhood fantasies."

Bill Savosik, president of the Wilmington Youth Hockey presided over the meeting and in his opening remarks read from a National Sports Survey and Report that only one out of 55,000 young athletes ever go on to play in the pros. "Kids should not be in this sport for that reason--the odds are too great. Sure, some of them are good enough to get some college money, but very little. Let the kids skate for the enjoyment of competition to help them in life skills, but the yelling at them is no good."

"Some of these parents and coaches are really taking things too seriously when it comes to youth sports and the pressure is just not good for young children in the developing stages," warned Dr. John Heckler, director of Mental Health Services at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington. "I treat kids as young as eight years old who just can't cope with this type of pressure, and many of them turn to alcohol or drugs to escape. Do you parents ask them what they want to do and how they feel about participating?"

Ron Swasey, Wilmington Recreation Department director participated in this program and brought a wealth of information on the subject of "parental and coach pressure" on children. "Look on my business cards, it says 'play sports for fun' said Ron, and 'that is what recreation is all about, having fun, not trophies and win, win, win!'"

The movie "First Goal" that was shown to this gathering of parents and children makes the point of having fun through the shared experiences of hockey great Bobby Orr and a group of Amateur Hockey Association players. "Although youth hockey is featured in this film, the message applies to any minor sport in your community" added Coach Cullen of the Wilmington High School Hockey Team.

"There is a thread that runs between alcohol/drug abuse and the pressures put on young people today. Our kids need to be told over and over again just how special they are...try asking what the score was not 'who won.' They are all winners and good kids, however some of them are making bad choices in using drugs and alcohol. I congratulate the Wilmington Youth Hockey League for cooperating on this program and I know they have more positive action programs in store for the kids and their parents," commented Mrs. Anne Linehan, chairman of The Chemical People.

Arts and crafts show draws big crowd

by Arlene Surprenant
Wilmington residents took advantage of some early fall weather Saturday and came out in droves to view the works of local artists and craftspeople displayed on the Town Common.

The Art Exhibition and Craft Fair is an annual event sponsored by the Wilmington Council for the Arts. This year, the sixth, featured two firsts: the awarding of the John D. Brooks Memorial Award for Excellence in the Arts to an outstanding local artist, and a sculpture category. Other categories included Oil and Acrylic, Water Color, Pastel, Mixed Media, Photography and a Junior Division, as well as a Popular Vote Award.

Throughout the day, viewers were able to browse among the 115 art entries set up under two tents near the gazebo. They were also encouraged to view and purchase dolls, wall clocks, country crafts, jewelry, floral arrangements, and other crafts on display on 12 separate tables.

The well known Lancaster Brass Quintet, from West Newbury, was on hand to provide musical background in the early afternoon with a variety of selections ranging from classical music to marches and swing tunes.

In the midst of the festivities, an unexpected wedding took place near the Town Common flagpole. Though they had hoped to plight their troth in the gazebo occupied at the time by the brass quintet, Brenda Jean Nason and Daryoush Afshin settled instead, for a second ceremony at the end of the field. They had been married earlier in Andover and held their reception at Wilmington's Knights of Columbus Hall.

The hardworking members of the committee which helped arrange and set up the whole exhibit were Adele Passmore (chairman), Annette Campbell, Elizabeth White, Charlotte McCain, Edith Michelson, Rita Strow, Mary Masse, Dan Ballou Sr., Larry and Janet Brewer, Francis Keough, Evelyn Choate.

Popular Vote Award: for "Lady Sings the Blues" to Cynthia Macinanti.

Oil and Acrylic: 1st place to Andrea Peters (Seasonal Color); 23rd place to Barbara Groom (untitled); 3rd place to Elva Proctor (North Shore Marshes).

Watercolor: 1st place to Barbara Johansen (Changing Seasons); 2nd place to Elaine Bradley (Shed Door); 3rd place to Phoebe King (Sugar House).

Pastels: 1st place to Marguerite McKeever (Serenity); 2nd place to Joanne Gargan (Summer Setting); 3rd place to Dora Hirtle (Heather and the Shell).

Mixed Media: 1st place to Cynthia Macinanti (Lady Sings the Blues); 2nd place to Charlotte McCain (New Hampshire); 3rd place to Gary Hastings (Indy).

Photography: 1st place to Ray Capodanno (New Boston Waterfront); 2nd place to Bernhard A. Toombs (Reykjavik Harbor at Midnight); third place to David Allen (Stonington, Maine).

Sculpture: 1st place to Deborah Dunham (Curlews); 2nd place to Rosario Celeste (Ted); 3rd place to Mary Masse (Calla Lilies).

Junior Division: Recognition to Mary Durkee (Butterflies, Partridge) and to Douglas Michaud (The Squirrel)

Wilmington artist takes award

by Arlene Surprenant
An exceptional lady as well as a talented artist who has found a niche in such media as oils, watercolors, and her special pastels, Dora Hirtle of Jacquith Road, Wilmington, Saturday topped the honor of being Wilmington's first recipient of the John D. Brooks Memorial Award. John was a former chairman of the Arts Council and a strong proponent of excellence in education and the arts.

The award, a purple and gold rosette ribbon, and a check for $25 was given to Dora primarily for her versatility and outstanding ability in the art field, said art committee chairman Adele Passmore.

"This was very much a surprise. I didn't expect to win because there were so many professionals entered," Dora told the Town Crier Monday. She went on to add that she felt privileged because the late John Brooks, through his personality, "radiated the characteristics of excellence in the education field." She said the award would further encourage her to pursue excellence in arts.

Despite health problems and a severe handicap which cut short both an early writing career in the public relations field and her oil painting for seven years, Dora has overcome much to reach her present pinnacle of success.

Dora has disciplined herself through daily sessions with brush and pastel crayons, art courses, an extensive reading of books on artists and their techniques to continue to grow in her art. She is primarily a self-taught artist, though she had lessons with a tutor and took night courses in her native Nova Scotia. She is currently enrolled in a watercolor correspondence course, thanks to a grant from the Wilmington Council for the Arts.

Dora was featured in the 1984 summer issue of "North Light," a monthly art magazine with an international distribution. She has garnered numerous first place ribbons and awards and displayed her works in nearby towns. She recently won a ribbon for her oil pastel "Cactus Dahlia," which was on display at a juried show in New York City during September. She is proud of her membership in the Pastel Society of America and the Wilmington Council for the Arts.

Wedding on common

People attending the art exhibition on Wilmington Common on Saturday were surprised to see a wedding party arrive for a brief ceremony near the flagpole. Brenda Jean Nason and Daryoush Afshin were united in a Bahai ceremony, which, by custom, had to be held outdoors. They also had a Methodist ceremony in Andover.

Under Massachusetts' Unclaimed Money Law (M.G.L. ch. 200A), accounts which have been dormant for at least five years are deemed to be abandoned and must be reported to the Treasury. The Treasury Department then tries to locate the rightful owner or legal heirs to return the money.

Chamber of Commerce to be polled

Members of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce will be polled by mail, as to their reaction to the talk given by Barbara Anderson, of the Citizens for Limited Taxation (CLT), Tuesday morning. Anderson told Chamber members of the current petition (Question 3) for a law to phase out the surtax on the state personal income tax, and to limit state tax growth to the level of growth in state wages and salaries.

The breakfast was at Stelios Restaurant with good attendance. The purpose of the poll, according to executive director Joan O'Rourke, is to assist the directors when the time comes for them to decide whether or not the Chamber should support the present initiative petition.

Citizens for Limited Taxation initiated the movement that led to a limitation of taxes in municipal government, commonly called "Proposition 2 1/2."

The present initiative seeks a repeal on the Surtax of State Income, a repeal of the present 7 1/2 percent surtax, and imposes a 3 3/4 percent surtax for the calendar year 1986 only.

It provides that allowable state revenues shall not be exceeded, and provides methods of computing the allowable state taxes.

For three years Massachusetts wages and salaries have increased by 9.4 percent. So far in fiscal year 1986 state revenues are up 15 percent. The difference between 9.4 percent and 15 percent is revenue surplus, or excess.

A surplus is the money which was collected beyond the anticipated amount, when the budget was passed by the State Legislature.

If the state had needed more, then the Legislature should have passed a revenue enhancement. This was not done. The state now has a revenue excess.

Anderson asked the chamber members to join her in a repeal of the state surtax, and that the chamber support the tax cap proposal for Massachusetts that the Citizens for Limited Taxation has placed on the ballot (Question 3).

A Yes vote, she told her audience, would serve to lock in the gains made by CLT in the past. It would also serve to stop the "continuing spending" by state legislators.

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski rose to dispute her position. Anderson waited patiently while Stapczynski pointed out that excess state revenue, during the past year, has provided new windows for Wilmington High School and for the new water plant, soon to be erected in North Wilmington.

That, she said, when Stapczynski had finished, is exactly what I mean. The state is spending money without going through the legislative process. All over the state money is being spent, and no one has an accounting of what is happening!

Mass. unemployment up slightly

Massachusetts posted a 3.9 percent unemployment rate in August, up slightly from July's 3.7 percent rate, Kristin S. Demong, director of the Division of Employment Security (DEA) announced recently. August marks the 30th consecutive month that Massachusetts has posted the lowest unemployment rate of the nation's 11 industrial states.

The Commonwealth's unemployment rate continues to stand nearly three full percentage points below the national rate. In August the national rate was 6.8 percent, slightly lower than July's 6.9 percent rate.

"The Massachusetts economy continues to show steady growth," said Demong. "We now have more people working in the state than ever before, and the strength and diversity of our economy has enabled these new workers to find jobs."

In August, Massachusetts added

16,000 workers; employment in the Commonwealth now totals nearly three million.

"As more workers enter the labor force, the state remains committed to providing opportunities to those workers facing employment barriers," continued Demong. "Special state programs focus on helping these workers find jobs. The Employment and Training Choices Program, for example, has helped more than 30,000 welfare recipients find a route out of poverty through lasting, unsubsidized jobs, while over 13,000 workers laid off by plant closings have been assisted through the Dislocated Worker Program."

Of the 11 industrial states, New Jersey's 4.7 percent rate was second to Massachusetts, while Texas recorded the highest rate, 9.2

Redmen bury Lancers, 27-6

TMHS heat

TMHS defensive end Dan Britten applies the pressure to the Lawrence quarterback in Saturday's 27-6 romp at Doucette Field.

Solid effort

Junior quarterback Jay Rideout completed 10 of 18 passes for 108 yards and two touchdowns as the Redmen rolled to their second victory this season.

Kenn sweeps

Senior running back Kenn Coviello enjoyed another solid afternoon with 80 yards rushing and a three yard TD scamper.

The chase

Jay Kelley and Brian Aylward were all over the Lawrence running backs as the defending champs remained undefeated. The Redmen play at Lowell Friday night.

Tewksbury Youth Football sweeps

The Tewksbury Youth Football Midget A squad nipped Mattapan, 14-12 in heated action this past weekend.

Mattapan dominated the early part of the game and came out of the first quarter leading, 6-0.

Early in the second quarter Mattapan drove to the Tewksbury six yard line where the Tewksbury defense led by Brian Brooks, Todd Bairstow, Steven Fields and Mark Menezes made several key stops.

The Redmen offense then drove 94 yards capped by a 25 yard touchdown pass from Sean Mackey to Joe Mason to tie the score.

In the third quarter behind the blocking of Andy DeFelice and Brian Brooks, Timmy Lightfoot returned the kickoff for a touchdown. The two point conversion was good and Tewksbury led, 14-6.

Mattapan came back in the fourth quarter on a 30 yard pass play to cut the lead to two points. On the two point conversion attempt, Bob Borasso, Joe Mason and Sean Rogers broke through to make the tackle with no time left on the clock.

Other standouts for the Redmen were Mike Morin, Rich Proulx and Mike Gillette.

Tewksbury 20 Mattapan 6. Leading the Redmen B squad on offense were Dana Boudreau with two touchdown passes to Roy Fabila. Defensive standouts were Kevin Green, Wally Jop, Joe Goglia and Bob Smyth. Sal Reitano and Dana Boudreau also starred on defense.

Three straight for Redmen

TMHS soccer starts fast

The Tewksbury High School varsity soccer squad had probably the most successful week in its 11 year history this past week, as they defeated three of the top schools in the Large School Conference - Chelmsford, 1-0; Lowell, 5-1; and Billerica 2-1. Since all three games are added to their overall schedule, the games were added on as non-conference games and will not count toward the league standings.

The MVC Conference schedule begins this week, as the Redmen will have played at Dracut yesterday, and travel to Methuen tomorrow, Thursday, Sept. 25. Saturday morning at 10, the Redmen host Wilmington at the Junior High School, the junior varsity playing at the Livingston Street soccer field. On Tuesday, Sept. 30, Tewksbury will host Large School, three-year defending champion and state semi-finalist, Andover High.

Tewksbury 1 Chelmsford 0
Chelmsford, considered one of the finest coached teams around, came to Tewksbury lacking the scoring punch it displayed in the conference last season, but still very well skilled. The first half was a "horseshoe in the back pocket" half for the Redmen, as the Lions had three shots hit the crossbar and had four shots stopped, all on instinct reflexes alone by Tewksbury netminder, junior Danny Fiore.

Chelmsford's speed through the middle gave them several breakaway opportunities, but the Redmen defense and Fiore survived. Chelmsford, looking to break the scoreless tie as the second 40 minute half started, came out strong again, only to fall victim to a Redmen counter attack and a quick throw-in that was misplayed by a Chelmsford defender onto the foot of sophomore scoring ace Tommy Walsh. Walsh pocketed the goal in front of the net and the Redmen led 1-0.

Although Chelmsford had a few minor chances during the rest of the half, it was Chelmsford who found the horseshoe in its back pocket in the second half as Tewksbury started missing golden opportunities to put the ball in the net. The Redmen defense was the name of this game, as the Redmen increased their team record to 1-1-0.

Tewksbury 5 Lowell 1
Tewksbury travelled to Lowell's Cawley Stadium for a 7 p.m. game and displayed an intense type of soccer necessary to defeat a highly skilled team such as Lowell.

Tewksbury goalkeeper Nick Grund, starting in place of injured goalkeeper Danny Fiore, gave up one goal to the Red Raiders 25 seconds into the second half on a misplayed direct kick. Other than that, Grund was in the right spot at the right time, as he stopped three genuine Lowell chances during the rest of the game and then watched as the defense created offense and keyed a Redmen 5-1 victory.

Tewksbury, able to contain the Lowell offensive, opened its own scoring barrage at 14.44 of the first half when junior Bob Adrian directed a Jeff Stone pass by the Lowell keeper. Jim Pollard converted a Keith Drugh corner kick, as the two sophomores gave the Redmen a 2-1 halftime lead.

Lowell scored right off the bat in the second half, and after keeping the Redmen on the run for the next 15 minutes, lost composure and got called for a penalty kick at the 18 minute mark. The shot was converted by Redmen back Mike Paglia, a senior. The goal woke the Redmen up, and then a minute after having an offside goal called back, the Redmen underclassmen went to work again, as Jim Pollard scored his second goal of the night off a beautiful ground pass from winger Timmy Quinn at 22.37.

Tewksbury closed the scoring at 37.18 when junior Jeff Stone put in a rebound off the Lowell keeper. Again, several Redmen played well, including Marc Paglia, Tim McCaffery, Sam Dias, Bob Field, Ricky LeDuc and John Fleury.

Tewksbury 2 Billerica 1

The Redmen non-conference record improved to 3-1-0 after their 2-1 victory over an excellent Billerica team.

Again the Redmen defense held strong, led by back Marc Paglia, Sam Dias, Ricky LeDuc, Tim McCaffery, Bob Field, John Fleury and Mike Paglia, all rotating in and out throughout the game. The offense was kept intact by an intelligent Billerica defensive squad.

As in the Chelmsford game, the Redmen were able to open the scoring from a throw-in, as although junior Bob Adrian got credit for the goal off a Marc Paglia throw-in, it was in actuality, a Billerica defender who headed the ball into the net at the 9:39 mark of the first half.

A perfectly executed direct kick gave Billerica a 1-1 tie at the 13.04 mark, as junior Paul Robinson converted a perfect chip over the defensive wall from junior A.J. Silva, who had an outstanding game for the Indians.

Play stayed basically in the middle one-third of the field during the remainder of the half until with five seconds to go in the half, sophomore Jim Pollard sent a short square pass over to junior winger Tim Quinn, who chipped a ball over the Billerica keeper for the half-ending goal.

The second half was mainly Billerica, as they were victims of last second clearing kicks and a very hot goalkeeper in the person of Nick Grund, who is making it very hard for injured starting keeper Dan Fiore to re-assume his position when his right wrist heals.

Running back Kenn Coviello scats through a hole created by the block of center Jay Kelley (52). The Redmen are off to a 2-0 start with victories over Dracut and Lawrence.

Skating

The Tewksbury Youth Hockey Association will hold its registration for skating clinic on Saturday, Sept. 27, 1986 at St. William's Parish Center between the hours of 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. The clinic will run for 25 weeks and the registration fee is $39.00.

Grund, a senior, stopped four legitimate Billerica breakaways during the last 15 minutes of the game to preserve the Redmen victory.

Junior varsity

The Tewksbury varsity soccer team has had the benefit of excellent goalkeeping come through the junior varsity ranks over the past seven years, and had felt the same way going into this season, until unforeseen circumstances left junior varsity coach Bob Manzi looking for a keeper three days before his team's first game.

The junior varsity at this point, is 0-4-0, but with the exception of the Chelmsford game, has played very well in front of inexperienced and learning goalies. The junior Redmen lost to Concord - Carlisle, 3-1; to Chelmsford, 7-1; to Lowell, 4-2 and to Billerica 2-1.

Several upcoming Redmen played excellently, including freshman goalie Gary Kidder and sophomore forward/midfielders Brian Anderson and Brian Smith.

Freshman Greg Basillio and sophomore Pat Romano have been the main leaders in developing the offense, while senior Patty Moriarty has been a great stabilizing element to the Tewksbury defense that has played consistently well considering the inexperience in net behind them.

Juniors Billy Martin and John Bonfanti on defense, as well as sophomore Robbie Williams, have been key forces in starting the Tewksbury offense.

Others looking good for the JV's have been freshmen back Brian Wahl, freshmen Jamie Holden and Chris Sands as well as sophomores Kevin Breuer on defense and Mike Lafreniere, and John Boysen on the forward/midfield lines, both sophomores.

Town to form committee on drug, alcohol abuse

A townwide effort to control drug and alcohol abuse will get underway Monday, October 20 with the first meeting of the Selectmen's Advisory Committee on Drug and Alcohol Abuse.

Though local police efforts and an awareness campaign by the Chemical People Task Force are already seeing results, this meeting is slated to take specific steps to stop the growing problem. Members of several town boards, local health organizations, and police and SADD members will be invited to become part of this new committee.

According to Anne Linehan, who provided the impetus for the formation of the group, the committee will hopefully set up some long range plans to combat the use of drugs and alcohol in Wilmington and seek to obtain grant monies for education and counseling purposes. She told the Town Crier that her group, the Chemical People, has come about as far as it could and now the town, as a whole, must assume some of the responsibility for educating the public and stopping the use of drugs.

Parents' meetings

ary computers, the extended kindergarten day, and school reorganization.

"I would like to know the real anxieties," said Dembowski, adding he would encourage every parent with specific concerns to attend one of the evenings.

Follow up meetings will be held in the near future.

Wilmington senior topics

Flu, pneumonia shots

Flu and pneumonia shots will be given at the Buzzell Senior Center Thursday, Sept. 25 during the health clinic by Abbie. There is no charge for the flu shot but a $5.00 charge for the pneumonia shot. It must be remembered that we do not need a pneumonia shot every year. Check with Abbie before deciding to get another.

Podiatrist Friday

Podiatrist Dr. Leavitt will be at the Senior Center Friday, Sept. 26. He will be checking and treating ailments of the feet. Please have with you your Medicare, Medex or Medicaid cards when you arrive for an appointment. When you enter the Center get a number from Louise. The doctor will be at the Center from 9 to 11 a.m. only.

Bowling

Bowling has resumed at Candlepin Lanes in North Reading Wednesday at 1 p.m. Swimming will resume at Shawsheen Tech Wednesday, Oct. 22 from 10 to 11 a.m. The school has a very good restaurant for those who would like to make a reservation to eat on the day of the swim. It is necessary to call the school before 9 a.m.

Bowling and swimming are both under the Council on Aging and are two excellent ways to get needed exercise. It is also a good way to meet new friends, seniors who enjoy the same interests. After we retire unfortunately we also lose contact with friends we worked with for many years. Getting involved in programs under the Council will give you an opportunity to meet other seniors who have recently retired. Filling

A Wakefield woman creates 'The look'

By EUGENE A. SYLVESTER

WAKEFIELD — In California, they call it THE LOOK. And behind that LOOK is an entire industry. One which is totally dedicated to the proposition that real beauty requires a great deal of energy, imagination and effort.

Standing on Market Street in San Francisco or on Fifth Avenue in New York City, one gets ample opportunity to witness just what all that energy, imagination and effort is producing both in this country and throughout those portions of the world where fashion is a major concern.

Marketing experts, of course, will tell you that it's important for anyone in the fashion industry to create their own style; their own particular version of THE LOOK.

Thus, fashion greats such as Christian Dior, Coco Chanel, Ralph Lauren, Yves St. Laurent, Gloria Vanderbilt, Diane VonFurstenberg and many others have gone to great lengths to establish their own fashion identities.

Consequently when you see a polo player, one gets a certain image and a particular name comes quickly to mind. And when one sees various sets of initials at the bottom of a tie or on the back pocket of a pair of bluejeans, one's familiarity with those initials increases tenfold.

In Wakefield, a young woman — who is both a fashion designer/illustrator and hair stylist — is well on her way to establishing herself in the fashion world.

In fact, Michele Yebba, an instructor at Boston's School of Fashion Design on Newbury Street, could very well become the North Shore's version of a Parisian trend setter.

Starting when "I was very young and very interested in art," Michele has been "very attracted to fashion." As she put it, "Not only have I been interested in art all my life, but I've been interested in all aspects of art."

When she was "starting out," she said, "I was very involved with oil paintings, and also with portraits." As might be expected, it was her interest in portraits that eventually drew her to fashion illustration.

Graduating from high school, she first went to Salem State College where she was an Art Major in a program that "was just starting out that year."

From there (after two years), she said, she enrolled in the School of Fashion Design.

Now a teacher at that same school, Michele teaches Fashion Illustration "which I'm primarily interested in." This, she explained, "is the two-dimensional art of design. It's designing the particular clothing and putting it on paper rather than actually creating it."

Michele admitted that she would rather be involved with "that aspect of fashion," and not the actual "making of the clothing. I prefer not to have to sew the garments."

Saying that she has designed her own clothes as well as for other people, she is still waiting for the day when she can sit down and actually "create an entire line."

In addition to teaching at the School of Fashion Design, Michele also spends time as an instructor at another Back Bay institution, the Boston Center for Adult Education on Commonwealth Avenue where she teaches Fashion Illustration and Pattern Making.

"I also teach (at the Boston Center for Adult Education)," she added, "hair styling and nail care and skin care and make-up."

Because of what might be called a "dual interest," Michele looks at fashion design "a little differently." Instead of just thinking about the clothing "when I do a design, I think of the entire person. The hair, the accessories, the make-up, everything."

Tracing her diverse background, Michele told of how — following her graduation from the School of Fashion Design in 1980 — she went "to work for the Army as a clothing designer down in Natick."

In Natick, she said, "I actually designed helmets. What we did is design different shape and size helmets. There are a lot of people (at the Natick location) who do that."

And while what she did for the Old as the hills:

The local Guard

By JIM ROUILLARD

Civilians may say it's a tempest in a time warp — complicated by the involvement of the Pope and Julius Caesar.

But it's a matter of no small pride to certain members of the military.

It isn't just Harvard, you know, hoary with age and ivy, honor and distinction, that will have turned 350 this year.

An organization even closer to home, and closer perhaps to the hearts of the commonality, of whom it is composed, than domestic or imported royalty, also celebrates its 350th in 1986.

It's the Massachusetts National Guard.

Two local battalions, the 101st Engineers, headquartered in Reading, and the 182nd Infantry, based in Melrose, are, according to their members, the oldest of all. And it can show you painfully gleaned pedigrees, lineage and honors, to stake its claim as the oldest military organization in the Western Hemisphere.

But, like every piece of history, the claim is subject to some dispute.

Direct lineal descendants of two bodies of defenders created by the General Court of Massachusetts Bay in 1636, the 101st and 182nd battalions are certainly among the oldest, though the Massachusetts Guard's Adjutant General's Office cites three other battalions as descended from the early colonial regiments.

Yet at least one military historian, Russell Weigley, gives the nod to the local boys. Professor of history at Temple University and author of several histories, Weigley maintains the first colonial companies were converted by the Court's order into three regiments, with the North and East still in existence today, as the 182nd and 101st, respectively, as "the oldest units in the United States Army."

It might be argued that the local units documented colonial

MASSACHUSETTS ARMY NATIONAL GUARD will celebrate its 350th anniversary this year. lineage, in fact, goes back five years earlier, according to R.S. Thomas, Associate Military Historian at the Army War College.

It was in 1631 that former acting Governor John Endecott published his instructions from England to have "all planters and servants instructed in the use of arms and to designate certain days for training," according to Thomas.

Though younger as a colony than Jamestown, Weigley writes, "New England preceded Virginia in prescribing regular training periods for the militia. The Massachusetts law of 1631, passed when the colony was so new that it was extremely insecure, called for weekly drills, to be held every Saturday. "Later it seemed safe enough to drill less often, and in 1637, training days were set at eight a year...On training days, a town's militia company generally assembled on public grounds, held roll call and prayer, practiced the manual arms and close order drill, and passed under review and inspection."

"There might also be target practice and sham battles, followed in the afternoon, when times were not too perilous, by refreshments, games and socializing. A system of fines enforced attendance and helped finance the system."

Change of seasons

A great and good friend dropped by to see us the other morning, and related this story to us:

I never thought I'd actually see the day arrive, but it did. The day the summons to appear in probate court for my divorce hearing arrived, that is. Oh, I knew it would have to come sooner or later. That reality was always buried somewhere deep in the back of my head. But there are no words to describe the feeling you have when that day is finally upon you. Especially when you start to have second thoughts about the events leading up to that day, and I had plenty of them.

I've had plenty of time to mull over what has happened to me since my wife and I first separated nearly four years ago. When we split up, on a chilly, rainy December Wednesday, I had already long convinced myself I'd made the right decision. It was best for both of us. We had grown too far apart, and we both wanted to take different directions in our lives. And I had made the foolish choice to get involved with another person, someone I thought would make me happier than my wife. I was convinced, therefore, there was somebody out there who'd eventually make my wife happier also. Now that a few more years have gone by, passing like water under the bridge, as the old say-

Infertility workshop at Winchester Hospital

"Childless - Not By Choice," a four-part workshop on infertility sponsored by Winchester Hospital, will be offered to the public on Tuesday evening Oct. 7, and continuing on Oct. 21, Nov. 4 and Nov. 18 at the Woburn YMCA, 137 Lexington St. The workshops will run from 7:30 to 9 p.m., and will be conducted by Sally Stevens Eldred, M.Ed., Family Life Educator for Family Services of Greater Boston.

The purpose of the workshop series is to share with persons affected by infertility, the facts of the diagnosis and its effects on those who must experience it. The issues to be discussed will have relevance to those presently dealing with the infertility problem and to those who are related to or working with someone who is facing the problem.

The programs will be presented by Ms. Eldred, who has worked in medical rehabilitation, family counseling and hospice services. Inspired by personal experience, she became active with Resolve and founded the Resolve of Greater Hartford in Connecticut. She was a consultant and participant for the documentary, "In Search of a Child," produced by University of Connecticut School of Medicine in 1983. # Slender You in Reading

No Sweat Losing Inches With Mechanical Exercise Tables

There are a lot less inches around Reading these days and they're all coming off people who are taking themselves to a Reading figure salon called Slender You.

Lose inches with little effort in the new Slender You Figure Salon owned and operated by Patricia Levis. The business, which had its grand opening on September 15 at 95 Main St., features mechanical calisthenics and isometrics.

What is motorized calisthenics? We offer you a set of six motorized tables that support your body weight and move your body parts repetitiously in a condensed amount of time. There is no strenuous exercise, thus eliminating strain, sweat and fatigue. A minimum amount of effort is needed. This type of exercise is called motorized calisthenics. Calisthenic exercise works to firm and tone your muscles. The muscles are stretched and relaxed like an elastic band. As they are stretched and flexed, they become firm and toned and body "inch loss" results. Because the body weight is supported and does not have a resistance to fight against, muscle mass decreases in size rather than increases. Muscles acquire a sleek look. Remarkably, you do not get sore, sweaty, or tired because you are not fighting against gravity. (Gravity in calisthenics is resistance) Muscle strength is gained through isometrics on each table.

There is also a therapeutic side to the tables. The tables give you increased circulation, a wider range of motion and mobility of the joints. With each treatment, energy levels increase and at the same time you feel more rested and relaxed. Stress relief is essential for most of us with today's hectic pace and life style. Most people who have not been able to exercise because of bad backs or other medical problems have no problem doing a motorized calisthenics treatment. Ladies with arthritis and bursitis find relief after a few of our treatments. Most women, especially older women who cannot handle normal aerobics or Nautilus exercises, so profit from the therapeutic benefits of our equipment and program that their increased mobility permits them to become increasingly more active on their own.

We are all searching for the one "miracle way." There is no "one miracle way!" Being healthy and fit involves a good diet and exercise program. Slender offers you a calisthenics exercise program that you can be consistent with. Using the tables is the same as doing traditional calisthenic exercises on the floor five to six days a week, but it is difficult to be consistent for long enough periods in this traditional manner to obtain results. With the Slender You program, you can be consistent with minimal effort.

There are six machines or exercise tables that work on specific areas to tone and firm. The isometrics isolate a specific area of the body, helping the machines to work. The results are a sleeker, firmer look without muscular buildup. To achieve maximum results, all the client has to do is tighten and release certain muscles, the exercise tables do all the rest, its really wonderful — no strenuous effort, strain or fatigue.

There are a lot of old adages about exercise — no pain, no gain and if it doesn't hurt, its not working. This is just not true. A lot of people can't do aerobics or work out on Nautilus machines. Unlike other exercise programs, results from mechanical calisthenics are realized quicker. Most can see inches reduced after four treatments. "Like anything else in life, nothing is guaranteed, but results can be seen after four treatments."

Since there are no sweaty routines with the machines, clients can come in anytime they have a free hour. They don't have to have an exercise outfit or expensive leotard ensemble.

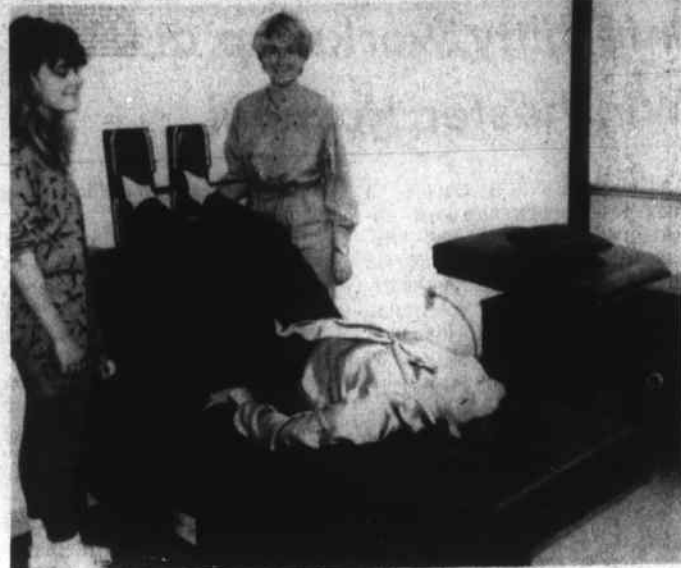

The Slender You program begins with a complete figure analysis to pinpoint figure problems. The first session begins with only 5 minutes on each machine. The machines and what they do are thoroughly explained. This introductory session is free and there is no obligation to return, although Levis says nobody has failed to come back. It is recommended that two sessions a week be used, however more and faster results can be seen by attending more frequently.

The exercise tables are designed for all ages, which is one of the reasons Levis purchased them. Currently, her clients are in the range of 20 to 70 years old.

The atmosphere is fun — there is no intimidation — all figure types are welcome. The results are immediate and the feeling of doing something good for your body stays with you.

Slender You is located at 95 Main St., Reading and is open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., Monday through Friday and Saturday, from 9 a.m. to noon. The sessions are by appointment. For more information call 942-1375. Remember the first session is free and no membership or contracts are required.

Guard

The early companies, according to Weigley, were composed of two-thirds musketeers and one-third pikemen.

The National Guard closest to home today is without musketeers or pikemen, but represented in the body of the 101st Engineer Battalion, and based at Camp Curtis Guild on Haverhill Street in Reading.

(Guild, incidentally, for all of you who may have wondered, is pronounced: GULED, since it was named for an American journalist and politician, according to National Guard spokesman Maj. Kevin Killeen. Guild, late Harvard graduate, lieutenant governor and brigadier-general in the Massachusetts militia, was also appointed ambassador to Russia, where he was awarded the Grand Cordon of the Order of St. Alexander Nevski, by the last of the Romanovs, Nicholas II.)

Unshaken in their own belief of being the oldest U.S. military units still in existence, the 101st and the 182nd will, in a sense, jump the gun a little on three of their possible cousins in ancient descent.

The two units plan to celebrate the landmark anniversary of formation of the colony's first militia regiments, with a joint battalion ball, slated for Oct. 4 at the Sheraton-Tara Hotel in Framingham.

But the dispute as to which present day battalion can claim to be the oldest of all may continue, as a matter of some little pride, according to local guardsmen and military authorities. It all centers on the General Court's order. Dated Dec. 13, 1936, the order apparently did not indicate a time of formation for each regiment: North, East and South, listed by some sources as the North, East and Boston Regiments.

If that's not quite complicated enough, the Pope and Julius Caesar also enter the picture, further muddying the historical waters, though only a little.

Pope Gregory XIII, in 1582, had issued the Gregorian

VISIT MCINTOSH COUNTRY

Cool autumn air, crisp, red apples, freshly made cider...New England apple season is just around the corner.

Apple growers in the six New England states and New York are a unique corner of the apple industry. Together they represent the largest McIntosh producing areas in the United States. This variety is most successfully grown in this area, comprising 75% of the national McIntosh supply, according to Thurston Handley, Home Horticulture Specialist with the Middlesex County Cooperative Extension, a division of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Other favorites — Red Delicious, Cortland, Golden Delicious, Macoun, Rome, Northern Spy and Baldwins are also grown locally. Roadside stands throughout New England offer a wide variety of native fruits and vegetables, cider, specialty food and even baked goods. Many of these stands also provide "pick your own apple" operations and have demonstrations of cider pressing. Autumn in New England is refreshing. Visit some of its agricultural highlights this year.

Contact the Middlesex County Cooperative Extension, Agriculture Dept., 105 Everett St., Concord, Ma. 01742, telephone 369-4845 or 862-2380, for a free copy of "Visitors Guide to the Apple Orchards of McIntosh Country" or the 1986 listing of farms offering "pick-your-own" opportunities.

Guild, late Harvard graduate, lieutenant governor and brigadier-general in the Massachusetts militia, was also appointed ambassador to Russia, where he was awarded the Grand Cordon of the Order of St. Alexander Nevski, by the last of the Romanovs, Nicholas II.)

Unshaken in their own belief of being the oldest U.S. military units still in existence, the 101st and the 182nd will, in a sense, jump the gun a little on three of their possible cousins in ancient descent.

The two units plan to celebrate the landmark anniversary of formation of the colony's first militia regiments, with a joint battalion ball, slated for Oct. 4 at the Sheraton-Tara Hotel in Framingham.

But the dispute as to which present day battalion can claim to be the oldest of all may continue, as a matter of some little pride, according to local guardsmen and military authorities. It all centers on the General Court's order. Dated Dec. 13, 1936, the order apparently did not indicate a time of formation for each regiment: North, East and South, listed by some sources as the North, East and Boston Regiments.

If that's not quite complicated enough, the Pope and Julius Caesar also enter the picture, further muddying the historical waters, though only a little.

Pope Gregory XIII, in 1582, had issued the Gregorian

VISIT MCINTOSH COUNTRY

Cool autumn air, crisp, red apples, freshly made cider...New England apple season is just around the corner.

Apple growers in the six New England states and New York are a unique corner of the apple industry. Together they represent the largest McIntosh producing areas in the United States. This variety is most successfully grown in this area, comprising 75% of the national McIntosh supply, according to Thurston Handley, Home Horticulture Specialist with the Middlesex County Cooperative Extension, a division of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Other favorites — Red Delicious, Cortland, Golden Delicious, Macoun, Rome, Northern Spy and Baldwins are also grown locally. Roadside stands throughout New England offer a wide variety of native fruits and vegetables, cider, specialty food and even baked goods. Many of these stands also provide "pick your own apple" operations and have demonstrations of cider pressing. Autumn in New England is refreshing. Visit some of its agricultural highlights this year.

Contact the Middlesex County Cooperative Extension, Agriculture Dept., 105 Everett St., Concord, Ma. 01742, telephone 369-4845 or 862-2380, for a free copy of "Visitors Guide to the Apple Orchards of McIntosh Country" or the 1986 listing of farms offering "pick-your-own" opportunities.

Sobriety group forms at Eastern Middlesex

This September the Eastern Middlesex Human Services Clinic will be starting an Early Sobriety Group for individuals who are trying to recover from alcohol/drug abuse. The purpose of the group will be to support people in learning how to live without abusing alcohol/drugs. The group will address a number of issues including: learning how to cope with stress, identifying feelings, coping with family problems, using leisure time, dealing with friends or family members who continue to drink, and building a life without alcohol/drugs.

The group will meet on Thursday evenings and it is open to both men and women. Although the group will be ongoing, its size will be limited to 10 people at any given time. Susan Stillwell, the group leader is a highly trained therapist who has had extensive experience in the field of drug and alcohol abuse.

This group will be charged on a sliding scale. No one will be refused services because of an inability to pay. A service contract from the Division of Alcoholism will subsidize those individuals who are unable to pay.

This fall the clinic plans to offer groups for individuals who are living with alcoholics and for adult children of alcoholics.

Anyone interested in being part of this group should contact Alice Cerino at the clinic (246-2010) and request a group prescreening interview.

ing goes, I realize just how wrong that line of thinking was. And as another old saying goes, the grass never turned out to be greener on the other side of that bridge.

This surge of second-guessing was too little too late, though, because all the damage had been done. The harsh words had been spoken one too many times, the tears had flowed until the ducts were no longer capable of producing fluid, and the threats were no longer just meaningless explosions of verbiage for the sake of hurting the other person. My wife had gone on to find another man, a man who seems to be better for her in every way, especially in the ways I had slowly grown to ignore in the last year or so of our relationship. And as for me, there has never quite been the fulfillment at the end of the rainbow I'd always believed would be there. In fact, I've been repeatedly hit with the harsh reality that there is no rainbow in the sky, folks, just a few colorful illusions that crop up once in a while to remind eternally romantic individuals they are doomed to spend the rest of their lives forever seeking and never finding. Seeking what, I don't even know anymore. Even if I found it now, I don't know that I'd recognize it, whatever that proverbial "it" is.

The court date was set for last Thursday morning at eight-thirty. I called my wife at work and told her about the summons. She sounded pleased, and I didn't blame her. For the last several months, the time during which we frequently spoke to each other to make all the legal arrangements. I'd gotten the impression she was anxious to put a cap of finality on our relationship and move on with her relationship with her new boyfriend. They had purchased a new townhouse together, and were waiting for the court appearance to be over before moving in together. This move struck me as rather funny; lots of people, single and separated, think nothing of setting up house these days. Then I remembered I wasn't dealing with just any woman off the street. My wife was special, and this example of doing things in a correct manner reflected another reason why I'd married her in the first place. After I'd hung up I chuckled madly to myself, thinking of all the girls I'd been exposed to since we'd split up. I could recall only one or two who had that kind of moral fiber. Yup, it was sadder than hell.

We made arrangements to meet at seven-thirty, on Thursday morning, in front of my lawyers office. The whole process was going to be simple. An uncontested settlement, in and out of the courtroom. My wife had agreed so amicably, in fact, she didn't even feel the need to hire an attorney. I paid for the legal end of it only because one of us had to have a lawyer make the arrangements for the court appearance and, of course, draw up the legal documents.

Thursday morning was a brilliant early fall morning. The air was crisp and the sky was the bluest I've seen it in weeks. My shoes became splashed with dew as I walked across the lawn to my car. A thin veil of dew blanketed the windshield, and it took several good sweeps of the wipers to remove it sufficiently to drive. As I slipped my car into the early morning traffic on Main Street, in the direction of my lawyer's office, I caught a glimpse of myself in the mirror. I looked tired, the lines beneath my eyes appearing deeper than usual and the streaks of grey bursting from my temples looking coarser than I'd noticed recently. I felt older for some reason, but the feeling faded as quickly as the image of my face in the mirror had become fogged up from the briefly visible puffs of my white breath.

I parked my car directly in front of my lawyer's office, so as to make sure my wife would not miss me. I was a tad early, and decided to switch on the radio to keep me company. I couldn't believe my ears: a traffic reporter was telling me about two — not one, but two — six car pile-ups on Rte. 93 south, one near Rte. 110 in Methuen, the other near the Concord Street exit in Wilmington. Both would undoubtedly be blocking my wife's progress, since she was travelling down from near the New Hampshire border. I could just imagine her stuck in those long lines of traffic, nervously wondering if she'd ever make it to our rendezvous on time. It would be close, since one of my wife's bad habits was putting off leaving to go someplace to the last minute, never allowing enough time on important days for obstacles such as six-car accidents.

There was nothing I could do except wait it out and hope she made it on time. Meanwhile, my mind continued to ponder my own existence, my own dilemma. I was facing a few, in fact. For example, the break-up of another relationship turned lousy. Oh, well, what's so new about that, I thought. He steam had disappeared from the mirror, and I took another look at myself. Yup, no question about it, I was getting a little older by the second. And feeling pretty darned burned out.

I thought about a Travis McGee novel I'd just finished. At one point in the story Trav had been sitting on a bar stool next to his great and good buddy, Meyer, the proverbial best friend and philosopher who always appears in novels like these. Travis was feeling very burned out also, and Meyer, always with a solution, offhandedly remarks that Travis is suffering from a classic case of the second law of thermodynamics, which states that in time all matter will eventually breakdown and decay. In other words, burn out. Ah, but there was also a solution to this fast-growing enigma (heroes are never supposed to burn-out, and if they do, for heaven's sake, they're never to let on that it's happening).

A Belgian mathematician by the name of Ilya Prigogine came along and altered the second law of thermodynamics by stating that matter only breaks down and decays when it isolates itself, and by opening itself up to new energy it continues to rejuvenate itself. Meyer used as an example the analogy of two cities, one surrounded by a wall, the other with no wall surrounding it. The city with the wall eventually broke down and decayed, while the open city continuously exchanged energy and grew. Travis McGee had begun to isolate himself from the world, and as a result he began to experience a sense of hopelessness in his life. He had pushed himself to the brink of a breakdown, physical and emotional. The answer was to open his life up again, to seek out his "space" again and rejuvenate himself.

I was feeling the same sort of isolation, the same kind of withdrawal that I knew could only lead to a breakdown, to further burn-out. I knew I had to find my own "space" again and bring myself back in touch with life. I was suffering from the second law of thermodynamics, and was desperate to break out of those walls and find my way back to the living again. Somewhere, somehow.

I snapped out of my train of thought, realizing a half hour had passed. Even if my wife had arrived at that moment, we would not make it to the Cambridge probate court by eight-thirty. I checked the radio again. The same traffic reporter came on and stated good news. The two six-car pile-ups had been cleared away, but traffic was still moving slowly. I just continued to hope my wife would make it soon. There was a chance that others, maybe even the judge, would be delayed by this early morning rush hour mess.

By eight-fifteen I'd just about given up hope she'd arrive in time to get this thing over with. I was certain I'd have to call my lawyer and ask him to reschedule our court appearance. Then I heard a tap on the passenger's side window. I glanced up, and there was my wife, looking only slightly stressed and not one bit dishevelled by the delay, peering down at me. She reform, omitting 10 days of that year (so the day following October 4 became October 15,) because of an error in the Julian calendar, which Caesar had instituted in 46 B.C.

By the 16th century, the Julian calculation error had accumulated to 10 days. Confused? It gets worse.

Most of the Christian world accepted Gregory's reform, except England and her colonies, who didn't cave until 1752, and Russia (by then the USSR) who waited until 1918.

So in 1636, December 13 was either December 24 or December 2—, I'm not quite sure which.

required the militia to be in a high state of readiness, according to Army historians. Hence the creation of the three regiments.

Picture then, the first muster (exact date unknown): two-thirds musketeers, one-third pikeman, and a bawling sergeant-major commanding all.

So who was first? Well, unable to locate the exact text of the General Court's order of 1636, I did find, in every secondary source I consulted that the listing of the North Regiment comes first. By that measure, I should say that the 182nd, as descendant of the first-mentioned North Regiment, then, is the oldest.

But my older brother, on the other hand, is a sergeant-major in the 101st Engineers, descendant of the ancient East Regiment.

And so, though I don't know whether or not he bawls on the parade ground, to insure domestic tranquility, I think I'll plump for the 101st.

Roving

climbed in, and we exchanged hellos while she straightened out her sweater top and calve-length dress and primed her hair. I couldn't help thinking how great she looked. I had seen her only a couple of times in the last four years, and not very close-up at that. She was close enough now for me to smell her perfume, and to see the several tiny moles I'd always found attractive on her. If I wanted to, I could have allowed myself to think back, to conjure up all those wonderful times she'd climbed into the car next to me when we were still very much in love, still so very happy. But I didn't. I just let the urge pass, and we drove away.

She apologized for being so late, and asked if I'd heard about the two accidents on Rte. 93. I told her there was no need to apologize, and yes, I had heard. The question was, did she want to chance driving all the way to Cambridge or ask my lawyer to re-schedule our court appearance. She definitely wanted to make a try at getting it over with that morning. I agreed, and we aimed the car toward Rte. 93 and Boston.

Along the way I got the distinct impression somebody didn't want us to make it to court. There was another delay at a major bridge re-construction site on Montvale Avenue, in Woburn, and the traffic on Rte. 93 was moving very slowly, perhaps the trailing effects of the earlier car crashes. My wife and I spoke little, and what we did say was spoken with unusual carefulness, as if what we had to say to each other would be misconstrued by one of the parties. Or perhaps we both remembered too much of the hurt that had overwhelmed our lives at the end. A couple of times I found myself drifting back to that point in our relationship. Drifting back to that chilly, rainy day in December, when I came home from work and discovered a moving van had taken away just about everything in the house. I knew that day was coming too, but that was harder to deal with than I'd expected. I remember how large the rooms seemed, and how, even with carpeting, my slow, deliberate trek through the empty house seemed to echo my presence.

Perhaps it was simply the sound of my own words, spoken to only myself and without control. Or the sound of my heart, which must have been beating out of control then also. I remember going back outside and standing in the middle of the street, in the dreary December darkness, giant globules of water streaming down my face, and crying. At that moment I regretted, honestly regretted, everything I'd ever done to hurt my wife, but it was too late to do anything about it.

I snapped myself back to reality, which was now a long line of slow-moving traffic approaching Medford. My wife looked at me curiously. I didn't want her to know how I was feeling, so I made an obscene comment about the traffic and being late. I didn't want her to know that, for God's sake, I wanted to cry.

After several unsuccessful attempts at finding a legal parking space, I opted to park illegally nearby the courthouse. It was nearly nine o'clock, and I decided to take a parking ticket rather than miss our chance at seeing the judge. A court officer directed us to courtroom number five, which turned out to be way down in the bowels of the old stone courthouse. So far down, in fact, it was located next to a locker room and a men's room. My wife and I both chuckled at this, and it was a welcomed break of levity.

Inside courtroom five we found my lawyer. He was finishing up another divorce case, and he looked relieved to see we'd made it, albeit forty-five minutes late. He briefed us on what to expect, and in a few minutes the three of us were standing before the judge. Since my wife was without legal counsel, the judge, an elderly, white-haired gentleman with the kind of round, understanding face you've come to recognize on the judges on those television courtroom shows, took extra time to question her. When he seemed satisfied with her answers, he raised the question of changing my wife's name back to her maiden name.

Finally, she replied, "Yes, I would."

The judge asked her to confirm the spelling of her last name, and she did so. My wife's maiden name is one of those difficult Italian names, so the judge asked her to repeat it again. She did, only this time, with a faint smile, she tossed in the editorial comment, "A nice Italian name, your honor."

I glanced over at the judge's name plate on his desk. It read "Hon. Judge Jeremiah J. Sullivan." I had all I could do to keep myself from bursting into laughter, thinking that should go over like a bomb. I wouldn't put it past the judge to postpone his decision.

Well, he didn't. And a few minutes later we were saying goodbye to my lawyer and heading back through the labyrinthian halls and out onto Cambridge Street again. As we strolled back toward my car I wished my wife well, expressing how much sorrow I was feeling for having put her through so much.

"I suppose I shouldn't forgive you," she said. "But you always told me there was somebody for me out there, somebody more right for me than you. I could never believe you, then I met him. Now I realize how wrong we really were for each other. We just didn't see eye to eye on anything."

"Don't think I don't feel badly about the way everything happened, because I do. I think I'm going through what I'm going through now as a means of punishing myself for all the hurt I caused you."

Yessiree, I was certainly getting a taste of my own medicine. What was so astonishing was my now ex-wife didn't seem to harbor bitterness towards me any longer, and we were able to move on with our lives as, well, friends. She wished me well too, and asked me about my plans.

"I think I'm going to opt for a lie in jeans and topsiders, perhaps buy a sailboat and bring my typewriter on board and spend the rest of my life just sailing up and down the Eastern seaboard. I guess I need to find my own space again."

She laughed half-heartedly. "Now I'm certain we were never meant for each other. That's definitely not for me."

We drove back to her car, and I watched her pull away from the curb slowly. When she was out of sight, I headed home. Along the way the second law of thermodynamic got the best of me and I cried.

Army "isn't really fashion design per se, it is clothing design and it was a very good experience for me. At that point, I really needed my designs to become more realistic. It helped me tone down what I was doing so that I wasn't just doing it for the sake of art."

Also at that time, she said, "I got together with some other people to put on some fashion shows. We would design and make the clothes and then show them off."

Looking at today's fashions, Michele is convinced that fashion forward."

In New York, she pointed out, "you have a variety of all different types. And there are so many people who are into fashion. In Boston you tend to have the preppy types."

Out in California, she admitted, "it's a totally different feeling because of the weather and so many other factors. There they really go in for style and outrageous design."

Her own particular favorite, she said, "is evening wear," although she has become more interested in "all aspects of women's fashion and lately I've been working in men's fashions."

In her classes, Michele said, "I teach my students how to get the idea out of their head and onto paper. That way they can

"fashion is very important to people. And I don't just mean clothing either. Hair and everything else is part of that. It's all related."

And while she realizes that "it has always been important to women, it seems to be coming more important to them now. Especially since so many more women are working. For that reason, fashion is always getting much more exciting and probably more expressive."

As for what particular fashions are current and popular in which particular parts of the country, Michele recognizes that "in Boston we tend to be much more conservative on the average, although you always have those people who can be called finally see if that idea is possible."

After all, she said, "I don't just want them painting a pretty picture. We have to be sure that what they're doing is a functional design. If it isn't they have to start all over again."

In other words, she said, "it's always important to know what makes a good design and what doesn't make a good design. It isn't a question of whether you like it or not."

Regarding her own future, Michele sees herself "continuing my interest in art." After all, it "isn't just my profession, it's my pleasure. It's what I do every day."

And, what keeps her interested in "art and fashion is people. That's what it all comes down to."

Partial solar eclipse visible on Oct. 3

On Friday, Oct. 3, most of North America will experience one of nature's grand events — a partial eclipse of the Sun.

A solar eclipse happens when the Moon passes in front of the Sun as seen from Earth. In a partial eclipse, the Sun is never covered up entirely. The curved edge of the Moon intrudes only part way across the Sun's bright disk, turning it into a crescent.

Only in a narrow strip of the North Atlantic Ocean east of Greenland will this eclipse be total, with the Moon completely covering the Sun.

In New England and eastern Canada the partial eclipse will be fairly deep, with the Sun becoming just a thin crescent. Farther west and south, less of the Sun will be covered. There will be no eclipse at all in most of California, Nevada and Arizona, as well as western Mexico.

DANGER TO EYESIGHT — Looking at the Sun is always dangerous to your eyes, partial eclipse or no. In past decades hundreds of people suffered eye damage when eclipses prompted them to gaze at the Sun. Sky & Telescope magazine reports that after the American eclipse of March 7, 1970, there were 145 known cases of eye injury. A little over half of these people never recovered their former quality of vision. In recent years, strong warnings by news media have greatly reduced the number of eclipse eye injuries. After the eclipse of May 30, 1984, Sky & Telescope uncovered only three cases in the United States.

SAFE FILTERS — Friday's event can be watched safely through a No. 14 rectangular welder's glass or through metallized plastic film made specially for solar astronomers, according to Sky & Telescope. Other materials such as photographic filters and smoked glass are dangerous and should not be used because they may pass dangerous amounts of invisible ultraviolet or infrared light.

Alternatively, the Sun's image can be cast onto a wall by using a small mirror.

WHAT TO WATCH FOR — Before eclipses were understood, many ancient peoples were terrified by the Sun's deformed appearance at a partial eclipse, thinking the Sun was diseased, under attack, or foretelling woe to its watchers. An eclipse begins with a slight dent in the Sun's edge. The dent is the silhouette of the edge of the Moon. As the minutes go by the dent slowly grows and deepens. If the eclipse becomes very deep, turning the Sun into a thin crescent, the entire landscape may look noticeably dimmer and cool breezes may spring up. Under trees, light shining through small spaces between leaves will dapple the ground with little crescent images of the Sun.

As the Moon moves onward, the dent in the Sun shrinks and finally departs, leaving the solar disk whole once again. The entire process can take over two hours depending on how deep the eclipse becomes at a given location.

Sky & Telescope is the world's leading astronomy magazine. It carries articles at all skill levels, from sky guides for beginners to research reports by leading astronomers.

Selected celestial news is available 24 hours a day on Sky & Telescope's recorded "Skyline," 617-497-4168.

If you haven't discovered our sensational sunset reception, you don't know what you're missing... It's almost a catered affair you can call your own. Carved meats, piping hot entrees, and chilled seafood overflow our lusciously laden 16' buffet table. Plus assorted salads, fresh fruits and vegetables. And a terrific selection of cheeses. And it changes daily. Just for you Monday through Friday, from 5 to 8 p.m.

And it's absolutely free.

Depending on your mood, there's a spot at Juliet's you're sure to cover. You'll find yourself warming up to our cool colors, our contemporary music spun by a D.J. — with an occasional "oldie" thrown in to please even a cynic.

And to top off the great club atmosphere, fine food, and cozy bar, head-spinning imagery weaves magic on 10 video monitors near the dance floor.

For business or after-business group entertaining, give us a call in advance. We'll prepare a special feast and even add extra cocktail waitresses to serve your guests.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

As I continue to walk the bounds of the Middlesex East area, I meet many wonderful people (even a few who don't like the column because of the "corny jokes"). I spent over an hour talking to Richard Crowell. He was a merchant seaman for over 30 years, then became a lobster fisherman, but is now retired. He was born in Nova Scotia and knows many of those wonderful craftsmen I worked with in the Boston Navy Yard. I do solemnly swear and affirm that I, Woodchipper, have never met any finer men and women than those from that little bit of Heaven, Nova Scotia. They are hard workers, honest and above all else people of integrity. (I know that because I worked with them for 19 years.) Furthermore, a cosmetic company would go out of business up there because the women have "natural beauty." Richard Crowell, I'm happy to have met you.

After paying a traffic violation fine and receiving a receipt, my aunt in a very irritated voice snapped, "What in the heck do I do with this?" The clerk didn't blink an eyelid saying, "Save it ma'am and, when you get four of them you get a bicycle." My friend Billy Drower said to his wife Nora, "To prove my love for you, I'd swim the deepest river, cross the longest desert and climb the highest mountain." Nora divorced him two months later claiming that her husband Billy was "never home." If you're moaning and groaning that nobody cares if you're alive — try missing a few installment payments. "What is your age? And remember, lady, you are under oath." "Twenty one and some months," she responded. "How many months?" "One hundred and eighty five."

My sister Maureen advised her teenage daughter Tracey that she should look for, then marry a man with similar background and interests, similar religion, values and standards. "Oh, mother," Tracey shouted, "You're old fashioned, don't you know that opposites attract?" "Listen here young lady, being boy and girl is opposite enough!" Officer Paul Pierce of Woburn stopped a lady driver and said, "Lady, when you came around that corner I said to myself, '45 at least.'" "I beg your pardon officer, this dress makes me look 10 years older."

It's only the first week of school and Dennis Tully is already in trouble. The teacher asked him, "What is the most outstanding accomplishment of chemistry in the last 500 years?" Dennis' answer was, "blondes!" Billy Baptista won three letters in sports, basketball, football and baseball in high school. I got that many in one week. My father signed them and my mother had to bring them back to my teacher. When I graduated the people who applauded the loudest were my teachers — they were happy I wasn't coming back to school. I said to Miss Sullivan, "No more school, no more books." She replied, "No more aspirins, no more kooks." Folks, I really loved her, she was a great teacher. I think she likes me, too. She sent a card saying, "A friend from Woburn sends her Woodchips and I'm still as nutty as ever." She went on to say that "She lives in the San Francisco area near the Bay, and for me to 'drop in' anytime."

An old saying, "Men never make passes at girls who wear glasses," is certainly not true today, especially if they have beautiful "frames" and personalities to match. My sister Maureen asked her son John when he came home on his first day of school, "How did you like school, Johnny?" "Oh, it was all right I guess, but I 'gotta' go back tomorrow." A real firefighter family, Barney Foster, retired after 32 years with the fire department. His two sons are dispatchers, Charlie on days and Eddie Foster on nights. Jimmy Serra is a cake decorator in a local bakery. My aunt asked him "How much is your 'pound' cake?" He smiled and said, "16 ounces."

Kathy Willis is a waitress in a diner. I went in, sat down and said, "How about a little service?" "Woodchipper," she said, "You got that when the 'door' opened." It's my pleasure to mention your name in Woodchips, Joan Morton of Woburn, Lt. Dan Gately told me you are a fan of the column. Eileen Pierce of Woburn, your son Paul Pierce looks real "sharp" wearing an "Arrow" shirt and a "bow" tie.

Paul, with Bob Giguere are MDC police officers, who were dispatched to investigate a body lying near a drain culvert near the Stone Zoo. Bob made out the report saying, "Found man dead alongside of a sewer, apparent cause 'sewerside!'" A shiny new truck loaded with a vast assortment of sandwiches, donuts and other pastry and, of course, the best coffee in the area — that's Chris Alphen's canteen truck. But, that only tells half the story, like most successful businesses there is a woman behind it all and in this instance it's Kathy Alphen, who cooks, bakes and prepares many tasty treats for customers to enjoy.

A mountaineer was arrested in West Virginia for running an illegal still. The judge, being both a brilliant legal jurist and a biblical scholar, noted that the defendant's name was Joshua so asked, "Tell me, are you the Joshua who made the 'sun' stand still?" The confused mountaineer replied, "No, your honor, I'm the Joshua who made the 'Moon-shine still!'" The Middlesex Supplement and Woodchips wish Rev. Francis Mackin, recently retired as pastor of St. Margaret's Parish of Beverly Farms, a happy, healthy retirement. Father Mackin served at St. Thomas' Parish in Wilmington for 21 years and at St. Margaret's for seven years. Father Mackin, I don't know you personally, but many of my friends have told me of your wonderful friendly personality. God Bless You.

The only "men of the cloth," in my family were tailors. One of them, Frank Guiliano, put a sign in his shop window saying, "Frank Guiliano, C.P.A." "Hey, Frank," I told him, "You can't do that — you're not a certified public accountant." "Who said that I am?" he responded, "My C.P.A. stands for, 'cleaning,' 'pressing,' and 'alterations.'" Bobby Fusco comes from a long line of bootmakers. I think his great, great grandfather made a pair of boots for Napoleon. He went in the shop to pick the boots up on the day of the battle of Waterloo, Napoleon took a deep breath, then gasped, "I smell 'de-feat!'" My aunt called me and said, "Woodchipper, your jokes smell, too!"

"Babe Ruth"

There have been many tributes to one of the greatest baseball players, the "Pride of the Yankees," Babe Ruth. He's in the "Hall of Fame" in Cooperstown, a story in the Sunshine Book by Will Forpe and John McCollister and a beautiful motion picture starring William Bendix. Babe Ruth hit 714 home runs in his major league baseball career. The cheers of the fans, the sound of Babe's bat hitting the ball and sending it sailing in a graceful arc over the fence or into the stands can still be heard today by those of us who remember Babe Ruth. He was a superb athlete, a compassionate gentleman, friend and hero to the youth of America. He was never too tired or busy to sign autographs and always doffed his hat in acknowledgement or simply to say "thank you" to the thousands of fans cheering as the greatest of them all rounded the bases for another home run. This warm-hearted human being was idolized here in America as well as Japan, not only for his power at the bat but for the example he gave every poor young lad in the country and the world. An Orphan Boy, made it to the top and they could do the same, in any field they chose.

Babe finished his major league playing days with the Boston Braves. An event of his last game, written by Will Forpe stands out in my memory. Playing against the Cincinnati Reds, the once agile, flawless baseball great made several errors. In one inning his bad throws, fumbling the ball and slowness were responsible for most of the runs scored against the Braves. The once baseball hero walked off the field slowly, discouraged and broken-hearted. To make matters worse, some of the fans who once idolized him raised their voices with thousands of others in a rising crescendo of boos, yelling, and sad to say, even swearing at the one time King of Baseball as he headed for the dugout. At that moment a young lad jumped down into the playing field, ran up to the Babe with tears streaming down his face and threw his arms around the knees of the man that was his hero. He wanted to share in the sorrow that was apparent in the Babe's face. This great man of baseball, admired by millions of fans for years, picked up the young lad, hugged him, then gently put his hand on the boy's shoulder and walked with him off the field. There was a stunned silence in the stands. The crowd became singularly penitent. Misty eyes appeared as strong men wiped away tears. They had just witnessed a miracle of human nature, a young man sharing in the humility of a fallen warrior. It was enough to change their hatred and frustrations to sympathy and love for the greatest of them all, "The Bambino," Babe Ruth. For many years Babe rode the crest of the wave of popularity, a humble man, now walked off the field in dignity. It represented the Alpha and Omega of an illustrious career. May God grant him Peace.

Reginald bought a pink shirt with huge purple dots. In the pocket was a note with a woman's name and address, and a request that the buyer of the shirt send his photograph.

"Ah, romance," mused Reginald, as he addressed the envelope, and mailed a snapshot as requested.

For a brochure or additional information, call Michele Zador or Nancy Anderson at 381-3451 or write: Globescope II, Lincoln Filene Center, Tufts University, Medford, MA 02155.

Several days later he received a reply. He hastily tore open the letter, only to read:

"Thanks for the photo. I just wanted to see what kind of a jerk would buy that kind of shirt".

MOVIE REVIEWS Rochelle Flynn

Blue Velvet and Short Takes

Blue Velvet starring Kyle MacLachlan, Isabella Rossellini, Dennis Hopper and Laura Dern. Written and directed by David Lynch. Produced by Richard Roth. Rated R (profanity, violence, nudity and sexual situations).

Best described as an "odd" film, director David Lynch (Dune) has crossed through the looking glass to give us his skewed vision of Middle America. At once perverse and mesmerizing, Blue Velvet is the Eighties version of an Andy Hardy fantasy in which Our Hero trips through suburbia, comes face to face with his first taste of evil, and likes it.

Set in Lumberton, where people have their chainsaws buzzin' on a crisp Saturday morn, the movie opens with a pleasant scene of a man watering his lawn. Pleasant until it appears he is having a stroke and becomes entangled by the hose. Lynch then gives us a close-up of the ground, the man is lying on and proceeds to dig beneath the surface, showing us an army of red ants. This shot is representative of the film on a whole, as the director continues to churn up the seamier side of humanity, all the while letting us enjoy the weirdness of it all.

Kyle MacLachlan plays the young man who takes a journey through his psyche when he realizes that he may not have been born to be bad, but it's a transformation he can easily make. MacLachlan immerses himself in a local mystery and discovers that at the core of it all is a damsel in distress, played with eerie detachment by Isabella Rossellini. She is a self-destructive woman, an impassioned temptress, and a far cry from the pink-cheeked prom queen world of Laura Dern, MacLachlan's less troubled girlfriend.

Also at the core of the movie is Dennis Hopper as a demonic criminal who is involved in a sexually bizarre triangle with Rossellini and a blue velvet robe. As you can see, this film is not going to be everyone's cup of tea. Those easily shocked should best skip this flick, because anyone who believes in Mom, Sunday services and Disney are going to be rather disillusioned to see Dean Stockwell looking like the make-up counter at Woolworth's as he minces through his small, but all-together debased role as an aging homosexual.

Those of us who shock less easily will be able to laugh. And if you can't laugh in the face of perversity, and don't want to pay to be unsettled, you can always look at this as a true moviegoing experience. Because, while some of us like Lynch's nightmarish style, even his detractors will have to admit that this is the most interesting film released so far this year.

Short Takes

Morons from Outer Space is a campy, low-budget comedy that is really quite funny if you don't have high-brow expectations. A British import, it takes our most revered science fiction flicks and presents them in an entirely new light. Rated PG-13. * 1/2

Eight Million Ways to Die has more cocaine, blue language and bloodletting than has been seen since Scarface was remade. However, Jeff Bridges and Roseanna Arquette bring a depth and humor to their characters that helps to override the convoluted script. Rated R. * 1/2

Down By Law is kind of like the Three Stooges for an art crowd. This odd, comically off-center story of two losers whose lives are turned around by a sunny, bumbling Italian has a certain naivete and charm that is quite appealing. Rated R. ***

The Gig is a little picture with a lot of heart about amateur jazz musicians who get their first crack at the big time — a resort in the Catskills. While the scope of the film may be small, it is made particularly enjoyable by a fine cast, especially Wayne Rogers and Cleavon Little. ***

The Fly is a gross-out scarefest laced with tragic overtones and may well be the quintessential horror flick of all times. Jeff Goldblum, in his finest performance to date, plays a scientist who manages to get mixed up, literally, with a fly, and the results are not for the faint of heart. Rated R. ****

Stand By Me is a nostalgic film about the growing pains and rituals of four pre-teen boys that was lovingly directed by Rob Reiner. This sensitive, funny flick about one last adventure before entering junior high is surprisingly based on a Stephen King novella. Rated R. ****

KYLE MACLACHLAN AND ISABELLA ROSSELLINI star as unlikely lovers in the David Lynch sensual mystery thriller "Blue Velvet," a De Laurentiis Entertainment Group release.

Aliens is the kind of flick that will have you holding onto your popcorn and your date to keep you from leaping out of your seat. An action/adventure/thriller, this sequel is more intensely scary than the original, and what plot flaws there are have been smoothed over with special effects and precisely timed shockers. Rated R. *** 1/2

Flight of the Navigator spins a magical tale of time travel, space travel and intergalactic friendships. It is also one of the few movies on the market that will leave you feeling happy, but not manipulated. Rated PG. ***

Armed and Dangerous takes the security guard business and does for it what Moving Violations did for driving schools: nothing. John Candy, a funny man, is lost amid the insipid plot and dialogue. Rated PG-13. *

Tea in the Harem may try to present a realistic story of two French teenagers who are trapped by poverty and their own lack of ambition, but in reality is pretentious and sexist. The awards it won in France can't make up for the overall dullness. Not rated. *

Nothing in Common is a good title for this flick, as it bears little resemblance to the comedy we expect from stars Jackie Gleason and Tom Hanks. A woeful tale about divorce and the generation gap, it would have been less confusing, to the audience and the cast, if this were a clear cut comedy or a drama, but not a dramedy. Rated PG. **

About Last Night could be the signature film of love stories for this decade, as it deals with young people afraid of commitment. The language is as raw as the sentiment, but the humor alternates nicely between intelligent and intense. Rated R. *** 1/2

Ruthless People is a fast paced, coarse, irreverent comedy that never loses its ability to make you laugh, even as the antics become more outrageous. A modernization of O. Henry's "Ransom of Red Chief," it's scurrilous Danny DeVito who refuses to pay two desperate young kidnappers to release his wife, a flashy, loud-mouthed Bette Midler. Rated R. ****

Ipswich River tour

As part of a nationwide celebration of Coastweek '86, the Ipswich River Watershed Association and Leagues of Women Voters in several area communities will sponsor a tour of the Ipswich River watershed on Sunday, Oct. 5, from 1 to 5 P.M.

The event will begin at the Field House, Essex Agricultural & Technical Institute, Rt. 62, Danvers, with the slide presentation "One County's Water" and an orientation. This will be followed by a tour of points of interest beginning at the headwaters of the Ipswich in Wilmington and ending where the river becomes tidal in the Town of Ipswich. The group will return to Essex Aggie for a buffet supper and discussion.

Endorsed by more than 250 organizations, Coastweek '86 is a theme around which groups, agencies and individuals work to foster awareness of the value of our nation's coasts and inland waterways. The Ipswich River is a public drinking water source for approximately 400,000 people within basin and near-by communities which withdraw water from the river. It is also an important recreational resource for people from all over the North Shore.

Protection of this critical natural resource requires the cooperation of all the communities within the basin and the other user communities. The Coastweek '86 tour will provide an opportunity for interested persons to learn more about the river and its many uses as well as the need for regional cooperation in protecting this valuable natural resource.

For tour reservations, contact the Ipswich River Watershed Association at 774-8927 or send a check for $5.00 to "IRWA", 562 Maple Street, Hathorne, Mass. 01937. The $5.00 donation includes the tour and buffet supper. Deadline for reservations is Sept. 30.
